French Occupation of the Ruhr District

THE occupation of the Ruhr by French troops presents three problems from a military point of view. The first consists of the advance into the district prepared at any time to meet the attack of other troops; the second is the choosing and occupancy of a line of defense embracing the Ruhr such that, should war ultimately come, the occupied territory could be defended from outside attack, and also used as a bridgehead for an advance into Germany; and the third is the control of the civilian population within the territory occupied.

The Ruhr River, which has given its name to the whole district, is really in the northern part of the area concerned. This for the reason that the valley of the Wupper, which runs into the Rhine a short distance north of Cologne, contains Solingen, Elberfeld and Barmen, three important industrial centers.

Just above Cologne the Rhine, finally breaking through the mountainous and hilly country, commonly known as the Rhine Massif, enters the immense plains through which the lower part of its course extends to the sea. On the right bank the last foothills of the Massif extend further than is the case on the left bank, with the result that the Southern and Eastern parts of the Ruhr district are more hilly and broken than is the case with the Northern and Western parts. There are no serious natural obstacles, however, to the free movement of troops in any part of the district.

The whole Ruhr is covered with a network of railways, tramways and excellent roads. The towns and cities are frequently so close together and so intimately connected with streets and buildings that it is difficult to tell where one ends and the next one begins. So much is this true that in the United States they long ago would have united into several large municipalities.

100,000 French Along Rhine.

THE French forces in the occupied territory along the Rhine number approximately 100,000. The units have been kept at war strength and ready for field service, with the result that they are always immediately available. The rest of the units of the French army, stationed throughout France, are approximately 200,000 below the peace strength authorized, due to the fact that large numbers of men were granted long furloughs without pay, because the army appropriations carry the money necessary for the maintenance of 610,000 men, instead of 818,000, the authorized peace strength of the French army.

The normal organization of a French division at the present time is three regiments of infantry, one regiment of 75-mm. field guns of nine batteries, making a total of thirty-six guns per regiment; one group of 155-mm. howitzers of twelve guns, one squadron of cavalry, one battalion of engineers and the necessary trains and medical units.

The Army of Occupation along the Rhine consists of three Army Corps, each of two divisions. These six divisions each

THERE is no movement more disliked by the soldier than the occupancy of a territory filled with a hostile civilian population. In battle there is no doubt about where the enemy is, in general, or who he is. The territory occupied by him is known, and the individuals who make up his forces wear a distinctive uniform.

In the taking over of territory occupied by civilians not in sympathy with the troops, a hostile individual or force may spring up almost anywhere, and disappear with equal rapidity under cover of the civilian clothes which they wear, the mass of the population, and the friendship of that population. Drawing the line between being content with a display of force in the face of a hostile crowd, and the use even of a limited amount of force, in order to prevent that crowd from overwhelming the troops concerned, is always a difficult decision to make. The civilian, as a rule, feels that he is entitled to do anything he pleases to the troops, but that they have no right to retaliate.

The author of this article crossed the Rhine at Ruhrort, the day that the Reichswehr took the town from the German Communists the summer of 1920, and from there traveled for a number of days all over the Ruhr as the Reichswehr cleaned it up. He entered Essen and various other towns with the Reichswehr. On hearing that Frankfort-Main was about to be occupied by the French he motored from the Ruhr up the Rhine, arriving at Frankfort late the afternoon of the day on which the French occupied it.

have four regiments of infantry instead of three. Units of the Army of Occupation are undoubtedly the ones being used to take possession of the Ruhr, their places, if necessary, being taken by units coming from France proper, which probably will be left at their peace strength, thus avoiding any expense for mobilization.

Since the war the French, as a result of their exhaustive study of their battle experience, have developed to a very great extent the tactical use of all arms. The most radical change from the American military point of view has been the adoption of the automatic rifle group as the lowest unit of combat for the infantry. The individual riflemen of the group are there primarily to further the use of the automatic, whereas in our Army the individual rifleman still remains the unit of combat in the infantry.

Occupation of Frankfort-Main.

THE methods used by the French in the occupation of Frankfort-Main in April, 1920, undoubtedly furnish a good model of what is being done in the Ruhr. The German city authorities were warned by the French to caution the population to engage in no hostile acts. French aviators reconnoitered the territory to be occupied prior to and during and after the advance. The artillery was in position ready to fire on all localities which could be used as strong points in case resistance should be offered. The cavalry moved forward through the country on both sides of Frankfort and beyond Frankfort, covering the front and flanks of the advance, except through the city itself. The advance into the city was made by tanks, infantry and armored cars.

The city and the surrounding territory were occupied without incident, other than a clash between a French cavalry patrol and some German mounted police. Throughout the occupation there was but one case in which the troops had to fire on a mob. In this case the fire bursts of machine gun fire were sufficient to stop the mob, among whom the casualties were comparatively slight.

Movement Along Rhine.

THE advance into the Ruhr is being made from Düsseldorf and the British Cologne bridgehead in a generally north-easterly direction. This gives the Rhine a protection to the left flank and enables the Belgians, who hold the bridges from Düsseldorf north, with small bridgeheads on the right bank, to cross as the French advance comes abreast of them and join in the occupation. The right flank, in the beginning of the advance at least, is protected by the British Cologne bridgehead, which includes the lower part of the Wupper valley. The extent of the advance is not yet known. The Lippe river, which runs through Hamm, Lunen and Dorsten and into the Rhine at Wesel, furnishes a convenient natural obstacle, far enough north of the industrial district proper to protect it from any artillery fire other than guns of the heaviest caliber.

When the German Communists seized the Ruhr in the spring of 1920 the Lippe was chosen as their main line of defense. Their infantry and artillery occupied this position and built trenches and battery positions. When the Reichswehr advanced the first actions took place in the forcing of the Lippe.

To what extent the occupation will be pushed to the east it is difficult to determine. Hamm and Unna are important from an industrial point of view. Their occupancy from a military point of view furnishes a number of difficulties, due to the fact that it will necessitate the French holding too much of a salient, and salients are peculiarly susceptible to attack. A line from some such point as Lunen on the Lippe river, thence in a general southerly direction to the British Cologne bridgehead, including Dortmund and Hagen, would take in the greater part of the Ruhr, and at the same time not make the question of defense against possible future attack too difficult.

There is no movement more disliked by the soldier than the occupancy of a territory filled with a hostile civilian population. In battle there is no doubt about where the enemy is, in general, or who he is. The territory occupied by him is known, and the individuals making up his forces wear a distinctive uniform.

In the taking over of a town, city or countryside occupied by civilians not in sympathy with the troops a hostile individual or force may spring up almost anywhere, and disappear with equal rapidity under cover of the civilian clothes which they wear, the mass of the population and the friendship of that population. Drawing the line between being content with a display of force in the face of a hostile crowd, and the use even of a limited amount of force, in order to prevent that crowd from overwhelming the troops concerned, is always a very difficult decision to make.

The civilian, as a rule, feels that he is entitled to do anything he pleases to the troops, but that they have no right to retaliate. The best disciplined troops will submit to operations on the part of civilians, directed against them; just so long, then if they do not cease they will retaliate.

The German civil authorities within the Ruhr were notified prior to the advance that the occupation was going to take place, and told to warn their people with respect to making any hostile move against the French troops. Whether or not the population of the Ruhr will obey the German civil authorities in this respect, not only throughout the advance, but throughout the occupation, remains to be seen.

Seat of Communists.

THE Ruhr was the principal seat of German Communism during the outbreaks of 1920, and was the point from which the Russian and German Communist leaders had planned that armed Communism would spread throughout Germany until it met the advancing Russian armies which were expected to crush Poland on their way West.

The German workers in the Ruhr who established Communism in this district were largely made up of men who fought throughout the war and whose considerable military experience enabled them to offer a fair resistance to the Reichswehr when they advanced South across the Lippe.

On the other hand, the thoroughness with which the Reichswehr cleaned up the Ruhr and the summary justice meted out to the Russian Communists who had come into the district for the purpose of creating trouble cannot have been forgotten in the two years and a half since these events took place.

Also the more conservative part of the population, having a vivid recollection of the danger to life and property, and the confusion and anxiety which existed during the time the Reichswehr and the Communists were fighting it out, undoubtedly will hesitate for a long time before taking, or even countenancing, any steps which would lead to disorder.

Why Most Club Houses Are Brunswick Equipped

Because the name Brunswick stands for 77 years of quality product.

Because since 1845 Brunswick has set the standard of the world for Billiard and Pocket Billiard Tables, Bowling Alleys and their accessories.

Because three generations of club men have used Brunswick club equipment and the name has come to mean to such articles what Sterling means to silver.

Because experienced buyers know that all Brunswick products are 100% Brunswick—made by Brunswick men in Brunswick plants.

The great majority of American clubs have Brunswick equipment wherever it applies.

The Tooth Brush

For Men in the Service

The correct type of tooth brush is known as the Decoater. It is made to the specifications agreed on by leading modern dental authorities.

All the world over dentists are advising this ideal type of brush. And careful people are adopting it.

The Decoater Tooth Brush is made in two styles. The Home Style has the standard type of handle. The Pocket Style, as pictured, folds into a ventilated metal pocket case. The handle-case is permanent. Simply buy refills as the brushes wear out.

This is the ideal tooth brush for men in the service. It fits the pocket or kit—it is clean, compact and convenient to carry with you.

THE THREE "AGES" OF SHOEMAKING

For centuries and centuries the method of making footwear did not vary. A mural painting discovered in the ruins of ancient Thebes shows Egyptian sandal-makers at work after the manner of the early New England cobblers. Until a few generations ago boots and shoes were made entirely by hand, and wholly by the individual craftsman. This was the first "age" of shoemaking.

In the Eighteenth Century small domestic shoe-shops arose, and groups of men and women, in shops and homes, made the footwear of the people, the work being more or less divided, but all still done by hand. This was the second "age".

About the middle of the Nineteenth Century the factory system developed and the introduction of shoe machinery began, until to-day in no field of manufacture has greater progress been made or more efficiency been attained through machinery. This is the third "age".

There is a machine now available for practically every process in the making of shoes. And, by the way, there are one hundred and forty different operations in the making of a Goodyear Welt Shoe, universally recognized as without a peer in those qualities which make a shoe desirable,—comfort, durability, appearance.

Free and loyal discussion is necessary in order to conquer the truth.—Camille Flammarion.

Anthony Again Attempts to Cut Army Appropriations

THE report of Mr. Anthony's subcommittee on War Department appropriations clearly indicates that this committee is engaged in exactly the same practices as last year and the same efforts to disguise its determination to make cuts below the already too low budget estimates. Last year what was done was done under the plea of economy and rushed through before those interested had a chance to find out what was going on.

Fortunately this year the widespread determination on the part of those interested to keep track of what was going on, and thus prevent the "railroading" practiced last time has resulted in considerable attention both on the part of the military public and of Congress.

Attempts are made throughout the report by means of partial statements to defend last year's indefensible performance and to cover up an attempt to indulge in a similar raid on our already too small Army, be it the Regular, National Guard or Reserve components of that Army.

The report uses the fact that this year's War Department budget carries $9,000,000 less for the Regular Forces than was appropriated by Congress last year as proof that last year's appropriation was inadequate.

To those who know the truth, this statement would be laughable were it not for the fact that many will be taken in by this fallacious reasoning, if it is reasoning at all, and not the attempt to deceive with which it is apparently ear-marked. It is no secret that the War Department budget in practically every detail is considerably below what those most competent to judge consider the minimum and reasonable amount consistent with national security at the present time, let alone the future.

The same unwarranted attempt so frequently made in the past of trying to shift the blame for the reduction in the number of Regular officers from the shoulders of Anthony and Sisson, where it primarily belongs, to those of the War Department is repeated.

By taking the total number of officers actually in the Army and subtracting it from the 12,000 authorized an attempt is made to show that the reduction forced on the Army was justified. Nothing is said about the many vacancies which existed in the grade of second lieutenant; the limit to the number of officers which could be retained in each grade and the consequent necessity, under the law, to dispose of a large number of officers.

It seems hardly possible that the members of the committee cannot know these facts, particularly Mr. Anthony, who boasts of his familiarity with the Army.

An attempt is made to use General Harbord's loyal determination to somehow, in spite of every difficulty at least, have the Regulars make every possible effort to perform the missions assigned them under the National Defense act. Aside from his loyalty General Harbord undoubtedly knew that there were many only too willing to use the inability of the Regulars to perform those missions as an excuse to back up that act. He undoubtedly sensed that testimony on his part would be used, if possible, for this purpose and not to increase the Regulars.

The crowning fallacious argument is contained in the summary. Here the statement is made that "Never in the history of this country has it had so great a military strength in time of peace as it has to-day." True but never in the past has it had nor has it to-day adequate and economical preparation in accordance with the minimum needs of this country.

The pitiful state of unpreparedness in which we entered the war was largely due to the House Military Committee, of which Mr. Anthony was a prominent member at that time.

The improvements which have been made from that pitiable state of weakness, while large, are not sufficient to justify the cuts in the War Department budget proposed by Mr. Anthony's committee.

The report shows that the assurances given out from time to time that the budget estimates would be followed were nothing but "gas clouds" designed to put to sleep those vitally interested.

The necessity for the most vigorous combat on the part of all those who believe in adequate national defense is evident.

Army's Business is Combat, Not Day Labor

THE ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL published in its issue of Dec. 23 a letter from a retired officer, an analysis of which shows it to have been a plea for special development of the technical branches of the Army as against the line in general, and more particularly the Infantry, on the old ground so often brought up before of the greater education necessary for the technicians of the armed forces.

The argument advanced was based primarily upon a comparison with engineering work in civil life, the Infantry in general being compared to the laborers, because used in large quantities and because the ones who execute the physical work planned by the technicians.

About the same time Collier's Weekly published an article under the caption, "It Is Your Army—Put It to Work."

The letter to the JOURNAL and the article in Collier's are but different forms of the same misconception only too common in this country.

The officer who wrote the letter knew, of course, that the primary and only purpose of an Army is to fight, and that it should be trained with that end in view, and no other. The point that he missed is that while in engineering work the ultimate accomplishment rests on the thousands, or even tens of thousands, of laborers employed, these men are working under normal conditions with respect to general freedom from danger and have proper shelter, food, clothing, working hours, and nowadays even recreation.

Conditions Vastly Different

THE most brilliantly made military plans depend for their ultimate solution, not upon the common, ordinary work of large masses of men employed under usual conditions, but upon large masses of men unsheltered from the weather, generally worn out, frequently improperly fed, acting under conditions of extreme danger and in a generally abnormal physical, mental and spiritual state.

The laborer working on an engineering project has every incentive to continue his work, because by doing so he obtains that security which every human being at bottom desires. The Infantry soldier on the battlefield is being urged by the strongest force known to man—the instinct of self-preservation—not to continue what he is supposed to do. His work demands the highest qualities of body, heart and soul.

This war only proved what many previous wars have proved, that the most brilliant officers who spend their time on staff duty, even though it be General Staff duty and only has to do with the study of combat and the means to be employed, so forget the human element, which is the foundation upon which all armies must be built, that they are continually issuing orders which cannot be obeyed, or, if obeyed, only lead to disaster with resultant loss of morale.

Schools of all kinds are essential for the proper training of non-commissioned officers, cadets and officers. The day of the rough field soldier, who prided himself on never looking at a book, has long since passed. On the other hand, while weapons, tactics and strategy all profoundly influence combat, the factor of the greatest importance is the ability of the men who occupy the position of leaders to really actuate the human beings under their command with a desire to fight, and keep on fighting, when in the midst of great personal danger and subjected to every influence known to man to make them stop.

Combat is Army's One Object

THOSE who have really commanded men in action have this truth indelibly sunk in their souls. The officer who has not had that opportunity has only to take the history of any war to find it running through the whole story as the main reason for the events which happened.

The American public as a whole not only fails to understand this fact, but even has not grasped the fundamental principle that an Army should be organized, equipped, trained and led for one purpose, and one purpose only—combat.

Even the Bolsheviks have discovered this. Their plan to put their army to work in productive lines, so much talked of, has turned out to be merely a means of using a large part of the population for necessary labor for which they do not want to pay adequate wages. They have very carefully kept to one side of this scheme, and entirely free from it, a large standing army more and more trained for combat, and for no other purpose. Trotzky's own speeches show that he appreciates this fact. The orders issued to the army show that he is steadily working to increase the army's fighting value and have the men and officers understand that they are for combat, and combat alone.

The Turkish Example

FOR months men and women in this country have been telling what the Turk should be made to do, but always dodging the issue that combat is the only means to do it. For eight weeks diplomats at the Lausanne conference have unsuccessfully been telling the Turks what they must do, for the simple reason they cannot bring force to bear, and the Turks know it. The Turkish delegate, speaking to the correspondent of the New York Times, summed the matter up in a nutshell when he said: "If the Americans send a fleet with a hundred thousand men to the Gulf of Alexandretta to demand a home for the Armenians we will fight it out with you. If you send two hundred thousand we will kiss your hands and give you your Armenian home, but these are about the only methods by which you can get us to give up a slice of our richest farming territory."

The two hundred thousand would first, last and above all have to be a two hundred thousand trained for combat and actuated with a real desire to fight. Educational schemes imposed by a kindly but pacifist Secretary of War; attempts to make the Army into an industrial concern paying cash dividends and slighting the Infantry, which the French justly call the "Queen of Battles," could never produce a fighting Army.

Few Navy Men Ashore

IN the recent debate on the Naval Appropriation bill Senator Gerry defended the Navy Department in the number of men assigned to shore activities. The "little Navy" Senators had tried to make it appear that out of a total enlisted force of 86,000 there were 29,000 employed on shore. He demonstrated that actually there were but 17,000 whose duties might be properly classified as shore-going.

In connection with the item of 2,000 men serving on shore base submarine tenders he pointed out that these men were actually performing the same duty as others attached to sea-going tenders; that is, the upkeep of submarines, and that the only reason they were on shore was because of an insufficiency of tenders in commission. Hence these men are really a part of the fleet.

There are 1,400 men attached to "district craft," small vessels for various naval stations, and including sea-going tugs. The impossibility of administering a Navy without adequate means of water communication and transportation between shore stations and ships in harbor should be manifest, even to a "small Navy" Senator. It should be equally evident that the primary function of men attached to such craft is not a shore function. They spend most of their time on the water, which is often rough. They give aid to vessels in distress and perform most excellent service generally.

Included in the figures of the departmental critics were such items as 1,500 men in transit, 1,800 patients in hospital and 760 prisoners. The Chief of the Bureau of Navigation pointed out in his hearings before the House committee that the large number of men in transit was due to the smallness of the appropriation for transportation of enlisted men between stations. Under these conditions there is no alternative but to provide transport by naval vessels, which necessarily requires slow accumulation of men at suitable ports and holding them there until vessels are available.

Certainly there can be no culpability in such a procedure, except that of denying the Navy, already well short of the minimum requirements, the services of 1,500 men; a culpability which clearly rests upon Congress for not appropriating sufficient funds under the item of transportation.

The difference in cost between transporting by naval vessels or by ordinary public conveyance cannot be very great; in fact, under many circumstances it is cheaper to transport by public carrier. The money question involved is therefore a small one; but the question of the loss of service of 1,500 men is a serious one, under the circumstances of a personnel 30 per cent. less than needed for the treaty Navy.

As for the prisoners and hospital patients, if Congress will appropriate sufficient funds for commissioning new ships there should be little difficulty in sending them to sea also. Contrary to the apparent belief of many Senators and Representatives, the Navy is not afraid of salt water.

Troops in Germany Are Ordered Home

THE American Forces in Germany stationed at Coblenz in command of Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen, U.S.A., under orders issued by President Harding on Jan. 10 as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy were all ordered to return to the United States at once. The troops on their return home will be accompanied by General Allen, who also will relinquish his connection with the Inter-allied Rhineland Commission, of which he has been a member.

The decision to withdraw the troops from Germany was announced after a White House conference between the President, Secretary Hughes and Secretary of War Weeks, and the receipt of communications from Ambassador Herrick and Roland W. Boyden, unofficial American representative on the Reparations Commission.

President's Action Approved.

Although no official reason has been given for the withdrawal of the troops, the order issued for their return home was no surprise to those well informed, especially after the Senate, on Jan. 6, by a vote of 57 to 6, passed a resolution stating that it was the sense of that body that the President should recall the troops, at the same time disavowing any unfriendliness toward France. The action of the President has met with overwhelming approval in Washington.

While State Department officials declined to discuss reasons for the withdrawal at this time, enough was learned to lend strong support to the general belief that the order for the withdrawal was an act of protest against the French policy in the face of diplomatic advances of the American Government. The State Department in announcing the decision merely stated that the President deemed the time expedient for the recall of the troops.

The return of the American forces and severance of General Allen's connection with the Inter-allied Rhineland Commission are expected to be followed by the withdrawal by this Government of its observers from the Reparations Commission.

The Order of Withdrawal.

The Secretary of War announced the following details concerning the withdrawal of troops from Germany:

The transport St. Mihiel will be dispatched as soon as ready, from New York for the purpose of bringing the American Forces in Germany to the United States. Upon return, the vessel will be routed first to Savannah, second to Charleston, third to New York.

Troops will disembark and be distributed from ports indicated as follows:

At Savannah, Ga.—Hqrs. and Service Cos. (less two battalion sections) and one battalion, 8th Infantry, with authorized medical personnel, will proceed to Fort Screven, Ga.

Four technical sergeants, one sergeant and twenty-two privates and privates, first class, Q.M. Corps, assigned to 8th Corps Area to be assigned to stations by commanding general thereof.

At Charleston, S.C.—One battalion plus two battalion sections of Hqrs. and Service Cos. with authorized medical personnel will proceed to Fort Moultrie, S.C.

Three technical sergeants, Q.M.C., for duty in 4th Corps Area to be assigned to stations by commanding general thereof.

At New York, N.Y.—All remaining troops, commissioned, warrant officers and enlisted men assigned to 1st, 2d, 3d and 5th Corps Area per War Department instructions to be issued.

Only Few to Remain.

All troops will be returned except those pertaining to Graves Registration Service, and possibly a small detachment to remain in charge of property. The foregoing details together with definite instructions as to disposition of property have been cabled to General Allen, commanding the American Forces in Germany.

Service at Coblenz has been very popular with the officers and men of the American force on duty there. An Associated Press dispatch states that many of the men on hearing of the orders to return home were depressed by the decision, as it meant the end of the pleasant Army life at Coblenz, with its income of something like 3,000,000 marks annually and upward for the men.

Notice to Subscribers

A PACKAGE containing a number of signed subscription blanks from the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, taken by Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hines as representatives of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, unfortunately became lost in transmission to this office, so that we have no record of these particular subscriptions. As the money was paid for the paper when the subscriptions were taken, those who subscribed are entitled to the paper, and the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL would greatly appreciate if those who are not receiving the paper would notify this office. Upon receipt of notification their names will be put on the subscription list at once for the length of time for which they subscribed for the paper.

(eng.) shall have the rank of, and be of corresponding grade to, captains in the Navy, and commanders (eng.) shall have the rank of, and be of corresponding grade to, commanders in the Navy.

Sec. 2. That the title of captain commandant in the Coast Guard is hereby changed to commandant. Hereafter the commandant shall be selected from the active list of line officers not below the grade of commander and shall have, while serving as commandant, the rank, pay and allowances of a rear admiral (lower half) of the Navy.

Provided, That any officer who shall hereafter serve as commandant shall, when retired, be retired with the rank of commandant and with the pay of a rear admiral (lower half) of the Navy on the retired list, and that an officer whose term of service as commandant has expired may be appointed a captain and shall be an additional number in that grade; but if not so appointed, he shall take the place on the lineal list in the grade that he would have attained had he not served as commandant and be an additional number in such grade.

Provided further, That the engineer-in-chief, while so serving, shall have the rank, pay and allowances of a captain (eng.) in the Coast Guard, and hereafter the engineer-in-chief shall be selected from the active list of engineer officers not below the grade of lieutenant commander (eng.).

And provided further, That an officer who shall hereafter serve as engineer-in-chief shall, when retired, be retired with the rank of engineer-in-chief and with the pay of a captain (eng.) on the retired list, and that an officer whose term of service as engineer-in-chief has expired may be appointed a commander (eng.) and shall be an additional number in that grade; but if not so appointed, he shall take the place on the lineal list in the grade that he would have attained had he not served as engineer-in-chief and be an additional number in such grade.

And provided further, That a constructor, after ten years' commissioned service in the Revenue Cutter Service and Coast Guard, shall have the rank, pay and allowances of a lieutenant commander, and after twenty years' commissioned service the rank, pay and allowances of a commander.

Sec. 3. That hereafter no commissioned officer of the Coast Guard shall be promoted to a higher grade or rank on the active list, except to commandant or to engineer-in-chief, until his mental, moral and professional fitness to perform all the duties of such higher grade or rank have been established to the satisfaction of a board of examining officers appointed by the President, and until he has been examined by a board of medical officers and pronounced physically qualified to perform all the duties of such higher grade or rank.

Provided, That if any commissioned officer shall fail in his physical examination for promotion and be found incapacitated for service by reason of physical disability contracted in the line of duty, he shall be retired with the rank to which his seniority entitled him to be promoted.

Provided further, That hereafter when a commissioned officer of the Coast Guard who has had forty years' service shall retire, he shall be placed on the retired list with the rank and retired pay of one grade above that actually held by him at the time of retirement; and, in the case of a captain, the rank and retired pay of one grade above shall be the rank of commodore and the pay of a commodore in the Navy on the retired list.

Sec. 4. That an ensign, an ensign (eng.), or a district superintendent with the rank of ensign, shall be required to complete three years' service in his grade, after which he shall be eligible for promotion to the next higher grade without regard to the number already in that higher grade.

Sec. 5. That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to reduce the rank, pay, or allowances of any commissioned officer of the Coast Guard as now provided by law.

General Pershing Decorates Two Officers at Culver

CULVER MILITARY ACADEMY, Culver, Ind., was honored on Dec. 7 by a visit from Gen. John J. Pershing. The General presented decorations for distinguished and heroic services during the World War to two officers of the academy: the Distinguished Service Medal to Brig. Gen. L. R. Gignilliat and the Distinguished Service Cross to Col. C. C. Chambers, 1908.

Colonel Chambers went to the academy Oct. 23, 1922, as a member of the administrative staff and was assigned to duty as executive officer. He is a colonel in the Infantry section, Officers' Reserve Corps, and also colonel and chief of staff, 37th Division, Ohio National Guard. For seven months he was on active duty in Washington as a member of the Operations and Training Division, War Department General Staff.

Final Meeting of Board on Navy Yard Policy

DESPITE the fact that he is now on the retired list, Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman has been ordered to the Navy Department, with his consent, to work out the final draft of the report on a policy for navy yards. It is expected that the report will be submitted to the Secretary by the board on Jan. 15.

The retirement of Admiral Rodman advances Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage to the upper half of the rear admirals.

Both Houses Agree to the Naval Bill

THE conference report on the Naval Appropriation bill, which was agreed to by the Senate and House on Jan. 10, in the main was a compromise between the bill as it passed the House and went through the Senate. As a whole, it is quite an improvement over the bill as it passed the House. The largest increase over the House bill was in the appropriation for the Naval Reserve. There was not quite a million increase in this item over the House bill, the House appropriating $2,994,000, while the conferees agreed upon $3,594,000.

The conference report appropriated $19,000 for the collection of naval war records, as provided for in the Senate bill. It increased the appropriations for the Judge Advocate General's Office from $76,420, as proposed by the House bill, to $78,720. It cuts the appropriations for the office of the Chief of Naval Operations from the Senate provision of $57,420 to $55,000, as proposed by the House. It struck out the authorization proposed by the Senate for the publication of ships' newspapers on board ships. It appropriated $14,440,000 for engineering, as proposed by the House, instead of $14,509,000, as proposed by the Senate. It refused to increase the appropriation for the pay of technical employees for the Bureau of Engineering above $150,000. It appropriated $180,000 for technical employees of the Bureau of Construction and Repair instead of $190,000, as proposed by the Senate.

Under the head of the Bureau of Ordnance the bill as agreed to appropriates $9,903,000 for "ordnance and ordnance stores" as proposed by the Senate, instead of $9,000,000, as proposed by the House, providing in connection therewith that an amount not exceeding the increase shall be available for purchase, manufacture and installation of anti-aircraft guns for the U.S.S. Maryland, and for ammunition and fire-control instruments for use with such guns; and strikes out the appropriation of $550,000 proposed by the Senate for the purchase and manufacture of torpedoes and appliances.

In the provisions of the pay for the Navy changes made in the phraseology with respect to extra pay to men enlisting to conform to the act of June 10, 1922, provide specifically for the payment of allowances authorized by law to members of the Naval Reserve Force, Class I (Fleet Naval Reserve).

The clothing and small store funds were made available specifically for uniform gratuity to enrolled men of the Naval Reserve Force, as proposed by the Senate.

Two amendments relating to the Bureau of Yards and Docks appropriate $53,250 for salaries of non-technical employees, and $135,340 for salaries of technical employees.

Amendments agreed to relating to the Marine Corps supply an omission in phraseology; provide specifically for the uniform gratuity authorized by law to members of the Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; change the phraseology of the appropriation for mileage so as to provide for traveling allowances in accordance with the act of June 10, 1922; strike out the limitation proposed by the Senate with respect to travel abroad on foreign vessels by officers, and provide for funeral expenses of accepted applicants for enlistment.

A direct appropriation of $19,007,000 for an increase in the Navy, as proposed by the Senate, was agreed to. An amendment was agreed to which restores the limitation proposed by the House with respect to diverting naval appropriations to meet expenses of the Navy Department proper, amended so as specifically to except enlisted men on duty at the Naval Dispensary and in attendance on the distant control station of the Arlington Radio Station.

Mr. Fish Awaits Report on Twenty-five Year Bill

CONSIDERATION of the Fish twenty-five year retirement bills for enlisted men of the Regular Army was delayed this week by two things. First, Chairman Kahn of the House Committee on Military Affairs was out of the city, and second, Mr. Fish did not receive the report that he had expected from the War Department.

Mr. Fish understands that the War Department is making a study of both of his bills, and that he will have from that source all the data that he will need to present to the committee. Aside from this, Mr. Fish declared that he could not have taken it up with the committee, owing to the absence of Chairman Kahn from the city.

Weekly Washington Letter

By E. B. Johns, Washington Correspondent

CHAIARMAN WADSWORTH of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs has indicated to the War Department that the Senate will give favorable consideration to a program which will correct some of the most flagrant inequalities which have grown out of the reduction in the number of officers of the Army to 12,000. He expressed the opinion that the Senate would not pass legislation which will disturb the promotion list, but that it would be willing to enact legislation which would ameliorate conditions of demoted officers, especially the captains who were originally among the lieutenants on the promotion list.

The War Department, in its recommendations for legislation along this line, has been asked to confine itself to four propositions:

1. To frame a provision which would determine the relative order for the promotion of the captains who were among the lieutenants before the Dickman board demotions were put into effect. This will probably be worked out so that the captains will be extra numbers when they are promoted.

2. To fix the relative rank of the captains in question while they are serving in lower grades and before they are promoted. This, it is said, is an important feature of the proposed legislation.

3. To make provision against the loss of length of service for pay and promotion of officers who have been demoted. Senator Wadsworth expressed his opinion that demoted officers should have the same credit as if they had never been demoted.

4. To make provision for the retirement of demoted officers. The law should be so framed that the demoted officers should be retired with the rank and pay of the grade from which they were demoted. This is to correct a decision of the Comptroller General.

Would Correct Injustice.

THE opinion was expressed by Senator Wadsworth that Congress when it provided that demoted officers should not lose any pay or allowance as the result of their reduction, meant that this should extend to retired pay. However, the Comptroller General has decided that the retired pay should be based upon the grade to which an officer has been demoted, and to correct this Senator Wadsworth insists that there should be some legislation.

When the War Department sends its recommendations to Congress it is planned to hold some hearings on the subject. This will naturally open up the subject and give opportunity to amendment to the War Department's bill.

Senator Wadsworth, however, expresses the opinion that if an attempt is made to radically broaden the scope of legislation beyond these four propositions there will be very little prospect of the passage of the bill.

Promotion in Marine Corps.

WITH the opening of the hearings before the House Committee on Naval Affairs on H.R. 13556 on Jan. 9 the question of promotion by selection becomes a live issue in the Marine Corps. The Secretary of the Navy, in a communication to the chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, has endorsed the bill which contains a number of provisions for promotion by selection. The bill takes leaves out of the Army as well as the Navy book and is an attempt to incorporate the best features of both Services into Marine Corps personnel legislation.

The Marine Corps has had less personnel legislation in the last twenty years than either of the other Services. For this reason it is thought that the bill may not be generally acceptable to the Marine Corps, despite the strong endorsement of the Navy Department. Since the consolidation of the staff departments with the line there has been very little dissatisfaction throughout the corps. Previous to that time there had been controversies between some of the heads of the staff departments and the line. There will be an inclination in the Marine Corps to declare "let well enough alone," despite the strong presentation of the merits of the bill by the Secretary.

Already some objections have been made to Section 2, wherein an officer may be found professionally not qualified without right to be present or to challenge members of the board which sit upon his case.

Secretary Defends Section.

THE Secretary in defending this section says:

"That in many cases officers who become due for promotion are on remote stations and can be brought personally before the board only at a great expense and loss of time, or are engaged in the performance of such important duty that the interests of the Government would suffer if they were detached from it even for a short period. In such cases the expense to the Government for mileage and the loss of services to the Government are not justifiable. It is thought that where there are seven or more officers on the board the interests of the candidate in matters solely professional will be fully protected and that appearance before the board will not be essential."

It is certain that this explanation will not prove entirely satisfactory to the corps. It is insisted by one who objected to this provision that an officer who is performing duty of such importance that the interests of the Government would suffer if he were relieved for even a short period surely should receive some consideration and be given a hearing before his case is passed upon finally by the board. There are other provisions which are being scanned very carefully by officers of the corps and will require explanation before they receive general support. There are a great many officers in the Marine Corps who do not regard with favor the general policy of promotion by selection, and until they are convinced that it is carefully guarded against favoritism they will not approve.

Progress of Anti-Demotion Bills.

REPRESENTATIVE MCKENZIE, who has been placed in charge of the bill (H.R. 12819-S. 4037) to stop demotion among the non-commissioned officers, is watching the parliamentary situation in the House with a view of securing its passage at the earliest possible moment. There is now no known opposition to it from any source, as Mr. McKenzie, with his usual energy, has been doing a great amount of missionary work.

During the week he changed his mind on the matter of attaching it to the appropriation bill. Monday, Jan. 15, will be unanimous consent day and he has an agreement with Speaker Gillette to secure recognition on that day to bring up the measure. If there are any objections from a member he will be in position to move to suspend the rules and place it upon its passage. This will require a two-thirds vote, but Mr. McKenzie, after looking over the situation, believes that he will be able to command this support.

The passage of the bill Monday will be all that is necessary to place the bill in the hands of the President for his signature. The bill has already passed the Senate in its present form and it will be unnecessary to hold a joint conference. The bill will go straight from the House to the Senate for the signature of the Vice President and then to the President before the end of the week. In ordinary procedure, it ought to be a law by Jan. 11 or 12 if it should pass Monday.

The only development to prevent this will be an unexpected extension of the debate in the House on the Army bill. If the Army Appropriation bill should be laid over until Monday it might take up the day that has been set aside for the unanimous consent calendar. Even with this postponement Mr. McKenzie thinks that he can secure the passage of the non-com. bill before the Appropriation bill becomes a law. He fears that the Army Appropriation bill may be held up in conference or in the Senate and he is anxious to secure the consideration of the non-com. bill as an independent measure.

Guard and Reserve Boards.

INFORMAL conferences between the National Guard Board and the Reserve Officers' Board were held this week at which the question of a dual commission was discussed. It is now believed that a form of commission in the Army of the United States will be worked out both for the National Guard and Reserve officers.

It will be recalled that at the beginning of the World War there were four forms of commissions for officers serving in the Army. They were Regular Army, National Guard, National Army and Reserve. So much confusion resulted that the one Army order was issued and only one insignia was worn on the collar. It is now claimed that in peace time the components of the Army of the United States have drifted back to the confused condition that existed at the beginning of the war.

There has been considerable discussion of this subject for more than a year, but there has not been an agreement as to how it should be worked out. One suggestion has been made that the same commission should be issued to Reserve and National Guard officers except that they should be designated as serving in the different components, as in the case of officers of the different arms or branches of the Service. Both National Guard and Reserve officers are approaching the subject in the most cordial spirit. There is no contention between the two boards.

May Hold Joint Session.

THERE are a number of other subjects in which both the National Guard and Reserve officers are interested which will be taken up while the boards are in session. In all probability the boards will hold joint sessions before they adjourn. In some quarters it is believed that it would be good policy to hold annual sessions of National Guard and Reserve officers' boards. There will always be some matters of a general character in which both of the junior components of the Army of the United States are interested, and such meetings would serve as a clearing house for matters that developed during the year.

The meetings this year of both boards are of extraordinary importance, and on that account their sessions will be longer than they would be if they were held every year. Annual sessions of two boards such as are now sitting in Washington would do much to secure close co-operation between the three components of the Army of the United States. There are certain matters that cannot be handled by correspondence through military channels. They can be adjusted satisfactorily only in a conference, and it is being urged that a National Guard board representing the different sections of the country and a Reserve officers' board representing each corps area should hold annual sessions in Washington. This would keep both the National Guard and Organized Reserve in closer touch with the operation of the General Staff and the branches and bureaus of the War Department.

For Relief of Nominated Officers.

AN effort will be made to incorporate in the general bill legislation for the relief of officers who were nominated but not confirmed before the last appropriation bill was passed. Senate bill 424 outlines the general proposition that will be advanced by those who are insisting that the large number of officers who were entitled to promotion before the reduction in the number of officers was made have been deprived of their rights. It will be recalled that a large number of these nominations were held up by the discussion of the legal authorities over the question as to the right of Philippine Scout captains to be promoted to majors. This was before the Colonel Major controversy and when there was no discussion of a reduction in the number of officers. It is stated that this is the first instance in the history of the Army where officers who have been nominated and held up have not received pay for the higher grades from the date of their nomination.

It is argued that the fact that a good share of these officers would have been demoted and some of them discharged ought not enter into the question. If they have been demoted they would have been entitled to the pay of the grade from which they were reduced. The same is true of officers who would have been discharged or retired. Under the existing law when they were nominated they were entitled to promotion. In effect, it is insisted, the Army reduction act was made retroactive, as it affected officers who failed of confirmation before the bill was passed.

New Executive for A.G.O.

PROPOSALS have been invited for the construction of eighteen double sets of officers' quarters and five double sets of non-commissioned officers' quarters at Fort Benning. Bids will be opened Jan. 31 and must provide that the buildings will be completed by Aug. 1.

The ten double sets of quarters for officers, which were authorized by an appropriation, of approximately $175,000, are about ready for occupancy and these are the first which have been erected at the Infantry School. Each set averages about six rooms. It is understood that about $350,000 will be expended upon the new construction. Plans for the next fiscal year call for the erection of a hospital at Benning at a cost of $275,000, provided Congress includes this in the appropriations, and also the construction of eight additional double sets of quarters at a cost of $125,000.

The great necessity for not only adequate housing facilities for the officers and men on duty at this post, but also a modern hospital, has been voiced by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL in these columns before. Old buildings are now being used for a hospital, which are claimed to be a veritable firetrap. Hundreds of the troops are being quartered in tents. The bids which are to be opened on Jan. 31 will include the first permanent quarters for the families of non-commissioned officers. Both officers and men are optimistic over the improvements which have been added for the welfare of the personnel of the post, and it is hoped that Congress will be liberal in construction appropriations for the next fiscal year.

Construction at Fort Benning.

MAJ. JAMES A. ULIO, A.G.O., who has been on duty as executive officer of the Adjutant General's office, has been assigned to duty with the American Red Cross relative to relief operations in Greece and Thrace. Lieut. Col. William N. Haskell, Cav., who has been in this country for a short period, sailed with Major Ulio on the S.S. Majestic for their duties abroad. Upon his arrival in Greece, Colonel Haskell of the American Relief Administration, will take charge of the relief work.

Maj. Harry Coope, A.G.D., A.G.O., who has been in charge of the old records division of the Adjutant General's office of the War Department, has been assigned as the new executive officer and he has already assumed his new duties.

French Paper Quotes Knox.

IN its issue of Dec. 9, La Liberté du Sud-Ouest, published in Bordeaux, France, reprints practically in full the article on "Why France Shies at Signing the Naval Treaty," by Capt. Dudley W. Knox, U.S.N., from the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of Nov. 11. The article is unanimously commented on by Louis Sarrazin.

Committee Reports Out Army Appropriation Bill

THERE was a stormy session of the Appropriations Committee Jan. 12 when the War Department Sub-committee made its report on the Army appropriations. Under the guise of limitation on appropriations there were a number of new legislative provisions. Remembering its experience with the Anthony sub-committee in the reduction of the number of officers to 12,000, the whole committee went through the bill with a fine tooth comb and struck out eight or nine legislative provisions.

The Army bill will come up in the House Jan. 16, and is expected to reach a vote in the House on Jan. 18.

Some of the provisions stricken out were meritorious, but were disapproved by the whole committee with the view of giving notice to the sub-committee to restrict its activities in reporting new legislation.

One provision of the Appropriation bill as reported by the sub-committee authorizes the Secretary of War to sell the horses of the National Guard and Reserves. The whole committee, it is stated, jumped upon this with both feet. The following are the legislative provisions which were stricken out of the bill by the whole committee:

Authorizing Secretary of War to sell surplus foodstuffs to foreign friendly nations. Limiting Reserve officers' active duty to fifteen days, except such as may be detailed for duty with General Staff or detailed for instruction at Service schools or detailed for duty as instructor at C.M.T. camps, or detailed for duty with tactical units of Air Service, or except one officer of Medical Reserve Corps.

That hereafter authorization for increase of flying pay contained in Section 13(a), act of June 4, 1920, shall be construed to include warrant officers of the Army ordered by proper authority to perform duty requiring them to participate regularly and frequently in aerial flights.

Changes from the Estimates.

Reductions amounting to $14,587,140 in budget estimates are made in the War Department Appropriation bill for military activities, while there are increases of $4,970,232. The assurances given out from the sub-committee that budget estimates would be followed are not borne out by the bill. From scanning the tables attached to the report it is apparent that a fight must be made both on the floor of the Senate and House to even secure the meager estimates of the budget.

Among the outstanding reductions are $38,020 for the Secretary's office and $34,120, General Staff. Under head of Organized Reserves, for pay and allowances, Officers' Reserve Corps, $846,700; mileage, $137,000; divisional and regimental headquarters, $494,400. Reserve Officers' Training Corps, $1,151,000; citizens' military training camps, $972,150. The total decrease for the Adjutant General's Department for these purposes is $3,000,000. There is an increase of $350,000 for camp maintenance, under the Organized Reserves.

Decreases for the Quartermaster Corps are: Subsistence, $750,000; regular supplies, $513,000; incidental, $115,032; Army transportation, $817,074; horses for Cavalry, Artillery and Engineers, $10,000; military posts, $1,260,000; military posts Hawaiian Islands, $573,490; military posts, Panama, $588,902; roads, etc., $50,000; construction and repair, hospitals, $275,000; total, $4,854,058.

The Air Service draws a decrease below the budget of $245,300, while the decrease for the Medical Department is $20,000. The coast defense estimates were reduced for battery construction, $20,185; searchlights, $13,500; supplies, $5,000; contingent expenses, $5,000; total for seacoast defenses of United States, $3,731.

Insular defenses are decreased $200,000 for electrical installations, Hawaiian Islands; $210,500 land defenses, Hawaii, with total decrease for seacoast defense, $484,065.

Field Artillery armament estimates are cut $160,000. The total Army ordnance reduction amounts to $219,000.

The Chemical Warfare is given an increase of $185,000. The total decrease for the Militia Bureau amounts to $4,970,232. The decreases are as follows:

For animals, $215,000; help, $729,273; expenses instruction camps, $1,000,000; expenses of officers and men at military schools, $100,000; pay property and disbursing officers United States, $5,000; travel, Regular Army officers and men, $50,000; repairs, Federal property, $25,000; transportation equipment, $25,000; expenses, sergeant-instructors, $127,750; Army drill pay, $1,443,860; total decrease arming and equipping and training National Guard, $3,720,882. Decrease arms, uniforms, etc., for field service National Guard, $1,250,000.

To Sell Surplus Horses.

The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to sell as soon as possible after approval of this act, horses and mules now at remount stations and posts or with the National Guard or the R.O.T.C. as are not in actual use.

Members of National Guard who have or shall become entitled for a continuous period of less than one month to Federal pay at rates fixed for Regular Army, whether by virtue of a call by the President, of attendance at school or maneuver, or of any other cause, and whose accounts have not yet been settled, shall receive such pay for each day of such period; and the thirty-first day of a calendar month shall not be excluded from the computation.

That hereafter the authorities at the U.S. Military Academy are authorized to charge admission to all athletic contests in which the cadets take part and the funds received shall be used solely for improvement of the athletic facilities at the U.S. M.A.

Chairman Anthony's Report.

In the course of the report on the Army Appropriation bill, which came out of the House Committee on Jan. 12, Chairman Anthony of the War Department Sub-Committee on Appropriations, says:

"The estimates upon which this bill is based were submitted by the President in the budget for the fiscal year 1924. The total of the estimates for regular annual appropriations submitted for consideration in connection with this bill is $319,773,970.28, of which the sum of $263,384,200 is for the military activities of the War Department and expenses incident thereto, and the sum of $56,389,779.28 is for the non-military activities.

"An analysis of the estimates carried in the budget shows that the amount asked for the support of the Regular Army—excluding items for Organized Reserves, National Guard, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and civilian military training camps—is over $9,000,000, less than the appropriations for this purpose for the fiscal year 1923, indicating that the reductions made last year by the Congress were not excessive.

"The estimates submitted in the budget were based on the same number of commissioned officers and enlisted men as is provided by law for the current fiscal year, i.e., 12,000 commissioned officers and 125,000 enlisted men, exclusive of approximately 7,000 Philippine Scouts. The accompanying bills makes provision for an Army of this size and carries a provision that the authorized number of enlisted men, exclusive of Philippine Scouts, shall be 125,000, the same as the current fiscal year. The number of commissioned officers is limited to 12,000 by permanent legislation contained in the 1923 War Department Appropriation act, as amended by the act of Sept. 14, 1922.

"The number of commissioned officers on the active list on Nov. 30, 1922, was 12,597, with an enlisted strength of 115,474 on the same date. The plans of the War Department contemplate the reduction of the commissioned strength to 11,385 on Dec. 31, 1922. Under these plans the War Department will make a reduction in officer personnel of 615 more than the reduction required by Congress last session in enacting the War Department bill, the reason given by the War Department for this additional reduction is that it will provide for new officers in the grade of second lieutenant. It is believed that this action by the War Department bears out the wisdom of the Congress last year in providing for the reduction in the commissioned strength.

"In view of criticism which has been voiced of the action of Congress last year in reducing the size of the Army, it is believed to be appropriate here to quote a portion of the statement made by the Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army when he appeared before the committee in support of the 1924 estimates:

"Mr. Anthony: Do you feel that the Army is in such shape that it can properly fulfill the different functions that are expected of it?"

"General Harbord: I do not think it can do as well as it could if we had 150,000 men; but I think that if the action of Congress indicates what I think is in your minds, that probably they are going to be allowed to straighten out and make a try on 125,000 men. I think the work will be done, and if we are going to have the 125,000 men and can count on it I do not think it is necessary to modify the program or the mission you gave us in the National Defense act of 1920. I do not think it will be as well done as it would be if we had the 150,000 men, but I do think it will be done and I think that if Congress seems to bear out the idea that we are going to be allowed to go along with 12,000 officers and 125,000 men, you will see the morale of the Army raised steadily, and the output will consequently be better."

"At various points in the bill, language is recommended authorizing the issue to training activities of material and supplies carried in surplus and reserve stocks held by the War Department in the same manner as was done in the current act.

"In order, however, to prevent the reduction of the Reserves below the quantity which would be required in emergency a provision is recommended in the bill that no issues shall be made which would impair the Reserves held by the War Department for two field armies, or 1,000,000 men.

Military Post Exchanges.

"An appropriation of $75,000 is recommended under this item as compared with an appropriation of $115,000 for the current fiscal year and a budget estimate of $85,000 for 1924. The principal activities carried on under this appropriation are the library and hostess services of the Army. The amounts asked in the budget for these activities, viz., $30,000 each, are provided. Language is recommended providing for the appointment of civilians employed in these activities by the Secretary of War under such regulations as he may prescribe.

Organized Reserves.

"A total appropriation of $1,705,000 is recommended under this head as compared with estimated expenditures for this purpose for the current year of approximately $1,315,000 and a budget estimate of $2,628,100 for 1924. The amount recommended will provide for training twice the number of Reserve officers trained during the current year.

Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

"An appropriation of $3,250,000 is recommended for this activity as compared with an appropriation of $3,100,000 for the current year and a budget estimate of $4,401,000, which latter figure, however, was informally reduced by the War Department to $4,120,937.50.

"The budget recommended the elimination for 1924 of the authority carried in the current act allowing the issue of material for the purpose from reserve stocks of the War Department, but the committee recommends the retention of this authority, which will reduce the funds required.

"Testimony in the hearings indicates that there are now approximately 104,000 students in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, of whom approximately 9,800 are in the advanced course. This activity is the principal source of supply for new officers for the Officers' Reserve Corps. Of the total of 3,527 who completed the advanced course this year 2,600 have so far joined the Officers' Reserve Corps, with an additional number of students not yet of age who received certificates of eligibility which enable them when they become of age to receive a Reserve commission.

Civilian Military Training Camps.

"The amount recommended for these camps is $2,000,000, together with unexpended balance of approximately $500,000. The amount appropriated for this purpose for current fiscal year was $1,800,000 and amount carried in budget for 1924 is $2,972,150.

"The budget recommends the elimination for 1924 of the authority carried in the current act authorizing issue of materials for use at these camps from reserve stores of War Department, but the committee recommends the retention of this authority, which will reduce the cash required. Amount recommended by the committee, together with unexpended balance of current appropriation and use of material from reserve stocks will provide for training between 30,000 and 35,000 men for 1924. The number trained during the current year was approximately 22,000.

"Under this head pay is provided for 12,000 commissioned officers and 125,000 enlisted men, plus approximately 7,000 Philippine Scouts. Amount for pay of enlisted men is based on providing for 95 per cent of the maximum of 125,000 authorized, on the assumption that the vacancies will average five per cent of the maximum authorized strength throughout the fiscal year. This is in accordance with recommendation of the War Department.

"The following new paragraphs are recommended for insertion under this item:

Provided, that hereafter the authorization for increase of flying pay contained in Sec. 13a of the act of June 4, 1920, shall be construed to include warrant officers of the Army who may be ordered by proper authority to perform duty requiring them to participate regularly and frequently in aerial flights.

The provision in the act approved April 27, 1914, making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, that the pay of clerks and messengers at headquarters of territorial departments, tactical divisions, brigades, and service schools, who are citizens of the United States, shall be increased $200 each per annum while serving in the Philippine Islands, is hereby repealed. None of the funds herein, heretofore or hereafter appropriated shall be used for payment of the six months' pay—authorized by the act of Dec. 17, 1919, to be paid to certain specified beneficiaries of officers or enlisted men of the Regular Army who die from wounds or disease not the result of their own misconduct—shall be paid to any child of a deceased officer or enlisted man who is not actually a dependent of such deceased officer or enlisted man.

Finance Service.

"For field service employees of the Finance Department the sum of $1,400,000 is recommended, same as for current year and same as estimated in budget. As in current act, $500,000 is made available only for compensation and traveling expenses of employees engaged on audit of World War contracts, this being amount asked by the budget.

Quartermaster Corps.

"The committee believes that adequate provision has been made under this head for food, clothing, transportation and utilities for the Army. The estimate for subsistence is based on a ratio cost of 30 cents, same as for current year.

"Under the appropriation for military posts provision is made for continuation of construction at Fort Benning, Ga., and for an addition to hospital at Fort Sill. For Hawaiian Islands appropriations are recommended for completion of refrigerating plant at Schofield Barracks, for continuation of construction of Ku Tree Beervor, forming part of the water supply system of Schofield Barracks, and for construction of magazines for storage of ammunition.

Air Service.

"An estimate of $12,671,300 is carried in budget for Air Service, as compared with $12,700,000 for current year. Committee recommends an appropriation of $12,426,000, based on reduction of $245,300 from amount asked for experimental and research work. Provision of $50,000 is recommended for continuation of airplane bombing tests against obsolete naval craft. Following additional language is recommended:

Provided further, that hereafter actual and necessary expenses of warrant officers and enlisted men traveling by air in connection with aviation shall be paid from the appropriation for the work in connection with which the travel is performed.

Corps of Engineers.

"Provision is made for activities of Corps of Engineers relating to mobile Army, and for those relating to seacoast fortification, construction and maintenance. Under appropriation for construction of gun and mortar batteries funds are recommended to provide for conversion of two 12-inch emplacements in defense of Boston Harbor to 16-inch emplacements. Under item for installation and replacement of electric light and power plants an appropriation of $26,500 is recommended as compared with estimate of $40,000, reduction based on elimination of $13,500 for installation of 60-inch searchlight.

Ordnance Department.

"Under the Ordnance Department provision is recommended for manufacture of small number of airplane bombs, small arms ammunition for rifle matches, for continuation of work on a few 14-inch and 16-inch gun mounts under approved project for coast defense, and for continu-

Army Horse Show Team is Planned

BEFORE the World War and more actively since, Army teams have taken a prominent part in many Eastern horse shows, to the great credit of themselves and the Service they represent. These teams have carried off high honors at the yearly horse shows at the National Capital, at the National Horse Show in New York and at other large shows in the Eastern part of the country, where they have had to compete with the best riders and horses that the country affords. The marked improvement in Army horsemanship, as plainly evidenced at these shows, has been the cause of much favorable comment on the part of the civilian horsemen. The progress made and the results already attained are all the more remarkable, considering the fact that the great majority of the officers who competed in these shows were mounted on Government horses secured at prices varying from $150 to $200 each.

Many suggestions, and many offers of assistance, looking to the sending of an Army horse show team to the International Horse Show, Olympia, London, and to the Olympic Games in 1924, have been received both by the War Department and by the American Remount Association. While the War Department could very properly accept offers of assistance if made in a definite form, it is understood that the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff felt that they could not themselves make, or permit officers to make, solicitations for assistance. In order, therefore, to set up a definite organization for handling this work, and in order also that a concrete plan might be submitted to the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff for approval and acceptance, the chairman of the sports and competitions committee of the American Remount Association designated R. H. Williams, New York city, and Pierre Lorillard, Jr., Tuxedo Park, N.Y., as a committee of two with full power to organize a horse show committee and to secure the approval and co-operation of the War Department of a definite plan of action.

Army Officers to Assist.

They have received assurance from the Secretary of War that the War Department will be glad to co-operate with the committee in every way possible and, at their request, the Department has authorized three officers to assist the committee in its work as follows: Maj. John A. Barry, as the Cavalry representative; Maj. C. P. George as the Field Artillery representative; Maj. C. L. Scott as the representative of the Remount Service, Q.M.C.

The plans of the committee, as far as they have as yet matured, are to collect suitable horses and sufficient funds both to mount and to pay the expenses of sending a team of ten officers, twenty-five horses, with twelve attendants, to Europe in 1924. The team will probably train at the military post at Fort Myer, Va., and it is the hope of the committee that it will exhibit in the autumn of 1923 at some of the leading horse shows in the East.

The first meeting of the special horse show committee, referred to above, was held in Washington on Jan. 3, at which were present: Pierre Lorillard, Jr.; Maj. John A. Barry, senior instructor in horsemanship at the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kan.; Maj. C. L. Scott of the Remount Service, and Maj. C. P. George, 16th Field Artillery, Fort Myer, Va. R. H. Williams, Jr., was detained in New York city, and could not be present.

Finance Committee Named.

A finance committee to raise the necessary funds for the purchase of horses was appointed, as was also a committee for the actual purchase of the horses, when funds become available. Robert Strawbridge, Sr., Bryn Mawr, Pa.; J. Watson Webb, Shelburne, Vt.; F. S. Von Stade, Westbury, L.I.; Maj. John A. Barry, Cav., U.S.A., and Maj. L. A. Beard, Q.M.C., U.S.A., all well known civilian or military horsemen, have been invited to serve on the last mentioned committee.

Maj. John A. Barry was selected to captain the Army Olympic team and this selection will, it is believed, meet with hearty approval on the part of the War Department.

The steps already inaugurated to have our Army properly represented at the Olympic Games have aroused a great deal of sympathetic interest among the civilian horsemen of the nation and among others who are anxious to have our own Army as well represented as the army of any foreign nation.

U.S.M.A. Class of '91 Planning Next Reunion

UNDER date of Dec. 16, 1922, Brig. Gen. Palmer E. Pierce, president of the class of 1891, U.S.M.A., sent a pamphlet to all surviving members of the class reviewing the class reunion held at West Point last June and giving plans for the next reunion. In regard to the latter, the pamphlet says:

"It was decided to build up a class fund, to be used in connection with subsequent class reunions, and it was recommended that the members of '91 be asked to send a yearly contribution, beginning with 1923, of five dollars to the treasurer for this purpose."

Finally, it was determined to hold our fifty-fifth reunion at the Military Academy during June, 1926, and to make it better attended and more enjoyable than any previous one. It is urged that you determine right now to be present."

The class is organized as follows: President, Palmer E. Pierce, 26 Broadway, New York city; secretary and treasurer, O. H. Harriman, 527 Fifth avenue, New York city; executive committee, John J. Bradley, 39 Whitehall street, New York city; Joseph T. Crabb, 14 Monroe place, Brooklyn, N.Y.; William P. Jackson, Hqrs. 2d Corps Area, Governors Island, N.Y.; Charles Hine, 30 East 60th street, New York city; John B. Cornell, 111 Broadway, New York city; historian, Louis C. Scherer, Washington, D.C.; assistants to historian, Walter M. Whitman, R.F.D. No. 1, Wrentham, Mass.; Francis H. Schoeffel, 639 Monroe avenue, Scranton, Pa.; Joseph L. Donovan, 272 Nagle avenue, San Jose, Calif.

Broadcasting Religious Programs in Army

THE War Department finds that, in addition to its practical application to military purposes, the use of the radio in connection with Army religious services is of very definite value. Maj. Gen. George O. Squire, Chief Signal Officer, has issued instructions to all Signal officers to co-operate, so far as is compatible with the interests of the Service, in broadcasting the various religious programs presented by chaplains at Army posts. According to the Chief of Chaplains, John T. Axton, the results of this action are already apparent.

Capt. Gerald Egan, Inf., Joins N.Y. Herald Staff

THE lure of printer's ink has proved strong enough to entice from the Army Capt. Gerald Egan, Inf., who applied for discharge and is now on the editorial staff of the New York Herald.

Before joining the colors Captain Egan worked on several Washington papers and was inoculated with the newspaper virus. He was commissioned from the first training camp and commanded the 3d Battalion, 319th Infantry, 80th Division, in the Argonne. He was the recipient of three citations for meritorious conduct, including one from General Pershing. After the war he was on duty for two years in the Adjutant General's office and for the past year has been editor of the U.S. Army Recruiting News.

On leaving the Army he was presented with a watch by the enlisted personnel of the Recruiting Publicity Bureau. While his friends in the Service regret his departure they feel sure he will be a strong rooter for everything that will help the Military Establishment.

Ex-Service Men Can Wear Medals with Civilian Dress

BECAUSE of the limitations imposed upon members of the Army in the wearing of medals and decorations with civilian clothes there has been considerable misunderstanding concerning the rights of former Service men in this respect. In order to remedy this condition the Secretary of War has caused the following additions to be made to Army Regulations:

Nothing in these regulations will be construed as prohibiting civilians who are entitled in their own right to decorations, service medals and badges, from wearing on all appropriate occasions such decorations, service medals and badges with civilian clothes of any kind, nor as restricting the method of wearing to that prescribed in these regulations.

The War Department has never claimed jurisdiction over this matter, but numerous inquiries have indicated the general desire of ex-Service men to conform to the official interpretation of propriety in the use of medals. The War Department considers it very desirable that authorized medals and decorations be worn on every appropriate occasion with any kind of civilian clothes.

16th Inf. Recruiting Campaign a Success

THE 16th Infantry recently completed a week's campaign for recruits. The entire regiment was placed on recruiting duty from Jan. 2 to 5, inclusive, in the city of New York.

An attractive poster was designed and each company had ten bulletin boards displaying this poster. The city was divided into company sectors, company headquarters being established at a strategic point in the sector. Daily bulletins were published giving the results of the previous day's work.

On Jan. 2 the commanding officer made a short address over the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's radio broadcasting station, in which he gave a brief history of the regiment, and also explained the recruiting campaign and made a talk for recruits. His address was made during an intermission in a concert given by the regimental band. Before the band had finished its program, requests began to come in by telephone for them to play certain pieces. So it was quickly demonstrated that both the address and the concert were reaching the public.

On Jan. 3 the regiment, band and colors assembled in front of the City Hall. All organizations brought their bulletin boards, posters, etc. The regiment was formed on three sides of a square and was addressed by President of Board of Aldermen Murray Hulbert, acting for Mayor Hylan. In addition to reaching the large crowd which quickly gathered, a great deal of publicity was obtained in the newspapers and pictorial sections of the papers. The moving pictures were also taken by the various news-moving picture firms for early release in the theaters of the city.

Though the weather was extremely inclement most of the week, the recruiting parties secured sixty-four recruits, and there are yet a number of applicants waiting on various certificates before they can be sworn in. In a preliminary campaign the previous two weeks by a small detachment of Company C, sixteen recruits were sworn in. The total of sixteen secured by both campaigns was eighty.

The recruiting has not been closed, but is being continued by a specially selected group of the best recruiters of the regiment. Every effort is to be made to fill the regiment to authorized strength and keep it there.

Detailed results by companies for both campaigns are: Co. C, 18; Co. B, 15; Co. A, 7; Co. E, 7; Hqrs. Co., 5; Service Co., 5; Co. D, 4; Co. F, 3; Co. H, 3; Co. G, 2; 3d Battalion, Fort Wadsworth, 11. Grand total, 80.

N.Y. World to Publish Story of 27th Division

"THE Story of the 27th Division"—really told as a story and not as a technical war history—written by the commander of the division, Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, is to be published in serial form, beginning Jan. 14, by the New York World. The story will continue daily for one month.

The chronicle of the 27th and its achievements in France will consist largely of stories of individual exploits by officers and men of the division. These thrilling episodes, seldom included in technical histories of the World War, are taken from the two large volumes of Major General O'Ryan's, "The Story of the 27th Division," as published in book form. They are certain to be of deep interest, not only to the relatives and friends of the 40,000 men who served, first and last, in the 27th Division, but to the general public as well.

A feature of the newspaper publication will be a complete list of the 1896 men of the division who lost their lives in action and a complete list of the 2,000 men of all ranks who were cited in divisional orders for exceptional bravery and service in the division. These will be published as a separate supplement in a form which can be preserved.

Of the twenty-nine American divisions known as "combat divisions," according to Col. Leonard P. Ayres's manual of facts about the World War, the 27th Division shares with one other the distinction of never having been assigned to a "quiet" sector of the front during its service in France. With the 30th Division it succeeded in piercing the tremendous defenses of the Hindenburg line, east of Ronssy, which until that time had resisted all assaults. In this action in a single day it lost more than 1,000 of its men.

Reserve Association in Massachusetts

THE Massachusetts Department of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States was formed on Jan. 6 at a meeting held at the State House, Boston. Col. George F. Keenan presided. One hundred and sixty Reserve officers, together with ten Regular officers stationed in Boston, were present.

Colonel Keenan outlined the objects of the association and what had already been done by the national organization. The resolutions adopted at the national convention in October, 1922, were read and approved, and it was voted to affiliate with the national body.

The form of state constitution furnished by the national body was read and adopted, with the blanks filled as follows: Name, Massachusetts Department of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States; state council, the officers and five additional members; state convention to be held at least thirty days before national convention. Local units: On application of ten eligible persons; unit council of the unit officers and three other members.

Officers Elected.

Officers for 1923 were elected as follows: President, Col. George F. Keenan, M.C.; first vice president, Col. Charles H. Tenney, Ord. Dept.; second vice president, Lieut. Col. Charles S. Wentworth, Inf.; third vice president, Maj. Douglas Crocker, F.A.; secretary, Lieut. Col. George B. Stebbins, Inf.; treasurer, Maj. Ralph H. Whitney, Engrs.; state council, for three years—Col. James J. Fitzgerald, Inf.; Col. Alexander Begg, M.C.; for two years—Lieut. Col. Charles M. Abbott, Inf.; Maj. Thacher Nelson, Inf.; for one year—Maj. Edward L. Moreland, Engrs.

Maj. Gen. André W. Brewster, U.S.A., commanding 1st Corps Area, addressed the meeting, pledging all possible support of himself and his officers to further the aims of the association.

Meeting adjourned after two-hour session.

Resolutions Adopted.

The new organization passed resolutions calling on Congress to provide for fifteen days' field training each year for at least one-third of the Reserve officers enrolled; stating that the organization strongly favors a Regular Army of not less than 13,000 officers and 150,000 men and a National Guard of not less than eighteen divisions, in order to provide for an effective first line defense; calling the attention of the American people to the impressive spectacle of Switzerland, which country during the World War preserved its integrity without firing a shot, as an example of the efficiency of preparedness as insurance against war; stating its belief that the Citizens' Military Training Camps will prove of inestimable benefit to the country at large by way of producing better citizens as well as imparting military training; affirming that the Reserve Officers' Training Corps in our schools and colleges should be fostered as a necessary source of supply for our Reserve officers in the future, and providing that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the National Council of this association, the Senators and Representatives in Congress from Massachusetts, the Secretary of War and the public press.

Reserves of 2d Corps Area Making Excellent Progress

EXCELLENT progress was made by the Organized Reserves of the 2d Corps Area during the calendar year of 1922, according to the records of Headquarters, 2d Corps Area, Governors Island.

On Jan. 1, 1922, the number of Reserve officers in the corps area was 10,500, of which only 800 were assigned or attached to units of the Organized Reserves.

The number of Reserve officers in the corps area on Jan. 1, 1923, was 11,909, distributed by assignments as follows:

In the General Assignment Group, 39.

In the Branch Assignment Group, 1,769. (Of this number (1,769) there are 137 warrant officers, U.S.A., and enlisted men holding commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps.)

National Guard officers holding Reserve Corps commissions and assigned to federally recognized organizations, 521.

Warrant officers and enlisted, Regular Army, U.S.A., holding Reserve Corps commissions, not assigned to the Branch Assignment or General Assignment Groups, 57.

The number of Reserve officers assigned to units of the Organized Reserves on Jan. 1, 1923, 7,182.

The number of Reserve Corps officers not assigned or attached to any unit of the Organized Reserves on Jan. 1, 1923, 2,343.

The Reserve division of the corps area adjutant's office is handled by the following personnel:

Warrant officers, U.S.A., 9. (Seven of the above warrant officers hold commissions in the Adjutant General's section, O.R.C.)

Enlisted men, U.S.A., on special duty (clerks), 9.

New York Reservists Form Local Association Unit

AT the first meeting of the local unit of the Reserve Officers' Association of New York state, held at White Plains, N.Y., Dec. 13, resolutions were unanimously adopted calling on Congress for support of the national defense in the way of adequate appropriations for all branches of the Service.

The object of the association is "to support and assist in the development and execution of a military policy for the United States which shall provide adequate national defense."

A temporary organization was effected with Col. Thatcher T. P. Luquer, E.O. R.C., as president and Maj. Eugene C. Roberts, F.A.O.R.C., as secretary-treasurer.

There were present Reserve officers representing each of the nine corps areas.

The following Reserve officers are on the board: Lieut. Col. G. G. Reiniger, G.S., Asheville, N.C.; Lieut. Col. H. P. Ward, G.S., Hamilton, Ohio; Maj. Fred B. Ryons, G.S., Lincoln, Neb.; Maj. John Perkins, G.S., Alpine, Texas; Capt. John B. Seymour, G.S., Chicago, Ill.

C.A.C. Reserve Officers to Give Reunion and Dinner

THE annual reunion and dinner of the Coast Artillery Reserve Officers' Association of the 2d Corps Area will be held in the Army and Navy Club the evening of Jan. 13.

All former officers, National Guard officers, Reserve officers and Regular Army officers are invited.

The speakers of the evening will be Maj. Gen. F. W. Coe, Chief of Coast Artillery; Brig. Gen. William Weigel of the 12th Army Corps, and Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, O.R.C.

On the banquet committee are Maj. Edward T. Harris, Maj. Charles E. H. Scheer, Maj. H. Edmund Bullis and Lieut. Abbott Oberndorfer, all C.A.C., O.R.C.

Commodore Forshaw Heads Naval Reserve Officers

AT the annual meeting of the Naval Reserve Officers' Association of the 3d Naval District held at New York city, Jan. 8 an unofficial ticket named from the floor headed by Commodore Robert P. Forshaw, commanding the Naval Militia of New York, defeated the regular ticket headed by Commander Boone by a vote of 171 to 37.

In addition to Commodore Forshaw, who holds the title of director, the other officers elected were the following: Vice director, Capt. W. B. Wait; secretary, Lieut. Comdr. J. L. Freeborn, and treasurer, Lieut. J. W. Alker.

N.G. Board Report is Being Prepared

THE indications are now that the National Guard Board, composed of Regular Army and National Guard officers, will be ready to submit its report before Feb. 1. During the week the committees of the board began the work of writing the reports upon the subjects which had been assigned to them. By Jan. 15 it is believed that the report will be in tentative form, in which it will be submitted to Maj. Gen. George C. Rickards, Chief of the Militia Bureau.

If the board should finally decide to recommend any new legislation the bill will be sent to Congress immediately by the Secretary of War. While it is not probable that it could be passed at this session, it is thought wise to have the bill introduced so that the members of the National Guard will have an opportunity to study it and impress upon Congress the importance of early action at the next session.

Reserve Officers Board in Session

THE first formal meeting of the board of Reserve officers which was appointed by the Secretary of War to revise the Organized Reserve regulations was held Jan. 8. The meeting was opened by an address of welcome from Brig. Gen. Charles H. Martin of the General Staff. Brig. Gen. John McA. Palmer also delivered an address to the board. The meeting was attended by the members of the National Guard board and a number of officers from the General Staff. It was a sort of get-together meeting to give the Reserve officers an opportunity to get acquainted with the officers in the War Department with whom they will come in contact in their work.

General Martin cautioned the members of the board against taking any radical action either in the matter of qualifications for Reserve officers or any other features of the regulations. He declared that it takes years to build up a military organization, and that while the regulations must be amended from time to time, great caution should be exercised in making these changes.

In describing the growth of the Officers' Reserve Corps, General Martin declared there had been about 6,000 added to the list in 1922. He expressed the belief that in framing the regulations the board should recognize that an officer's efficiency depended upon four things—character, knowledge, force and leadership. In working out the details of the regulations General Martin urged that these qualifications should always be held in view.

The board began its work by taking up the National Defense act with the view of ascertaining just what authority it had in revising the regulations. A great mass of data has been prepared by the General Staff which will be gone over by the board.

There were present Reserve officers representing each of the nine corps areas.

C.M.T.C. Club Formed in Vineland, N.J.

THE Cumberland-Salem unit of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States held a dual session at the rooms of Roosevelt Post, American Legion, Vineland, N.J., on Dec. 29, both being presided over by Lieut. Col. William A. Carleton, U.S.A., of Governors Island, N.Y.

The afternoon session was given over to outlining the aims of the Citizens' Military Training Corps and the plans adopted to train civilian youth in the science of war. This resulted in the formation of a Vineland C.M.T.C. Club with Ferdinand Fix, Jr., president.

The evening session was given over to the organization of the Reserve officers' unit involving the two counties and resulted in the election of Maj. W. S. Hood, president; Maj. J. S. Knowles, vice president; Capt. Charles P. Brewer, secretary; Lieutenant Mixer, treasurer.

COL. W. S. PRICE, commanding the 14th Infantry Regiment, N.G.N.J., has sent a personal letter to all officers of the regiment, thanking officers and enlisted men for their loyal efforts during the past year, and requesting further endeavor to make the regiment the best ever organized in this state.

Army Appropriation Bill Reported Out

ation of limited amount of development work. Amounts provided will provide for operating Ordnance arsenals on a scale sufficient only for maintenance and keep alive the art of gun design, etc.

Chemical Warfare Service.

"Amount recommended in this appropriation is $650,000, believed to be minimum which will allow the Service to function. The Director of the Budget has stated informally that due to reduction of estimate for Reserve Officers' Training Corps an increase in amount for the Chemical Warfare Service will not conflict with the financial program of the President.

National Guard.

"For the National Guard, appropriations aggregating $28,939,140 are recommended as compared with $25,815,000 for current fiscal year and budget estimate of $33,910,022. With increases in this bill provision is made for maximum growth of National Guard to 215,000 men during next fiscal year. The National Guard in the last few years has developed into a highly efficient military arm, and under its present system of training instead of being a force to be relied upon as a secondary line of defense for the country it may now be said to be a military force capable of performing any military duty to which soldiers of the country may be called.

"In the opinion of your committee the National Guard is still burdened by too many mounted, technical and auxiliary units, which are not only too expensive, but afford a minimum of military training for the expense involved. Economy of upkeep and the idea of preventing the ultimate cost of the National Guard growing into figures larger than the country will stand for make it necessary that its organization should proceed on more simple lines which do not involve too great a number of mounted, technical and auxiliary units to the main branches of the military arm, which, of course, should be maintained in proper proportion in their usefulness in time of war.

Military Academy.

"The amount recommended for the Military Academy is $2,142,156 as compared with a total for current year of $2,059,629 and a budget estimate of $2,066,428. Provision is made for completion of the new cadet hospital and nurses' quarters.

Summary.

"Never in the history of this country has it had so great a military strength in time of peace as it has to-day. Never before has the country possessed so many military resources in trained men and material. Our Regular Army now has double the number of highly trained commissioned officers that it had before the World War, and an enlisted strength 25 per cent greater than before the war. The National Guard is nearly 100 per cent. larger than it was before the war and a far greater military asset to the nation than ever before.

"Supplementary to these active forces are 69,000 men in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, a portion of whom are given field training each year, and 110,000 young men in the schools and colleges of the country are receiving military training and instruction under the Reserve Officers' Training Corps direction of the War Department, and during the current year 22,000 civilians underwent military training at camps under the direction of the War Department, and this bill provides for the military training of over 30,000 civilians during the next fiscal year.

Washington-Alaska Cable.

"An appropriation of $750,000 with a contract authorization of $750,000 additional, is recommended for replacing the worn out portions of the Washington-Alaska submarine cable system.

Lieut. F. B. Johnson, U.S.A., Killed in Air Collision

LIEUT. FONDA B. JOHNSON, Air Ser., U.S.A., was instantly killed near Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas, Jan. 10, when the plane in which he was leading a squadron collided with a plane piloted by Sgt. D. G. Warner. Both planes were completely wrecked but Warner was uninjured despite the fact that he dropped nearly 2,000 feet.

Mr. Howard Bruce Selected Head of Baltimore Dist. O.O.

MR. HOWARD BRUCE of Baltimore, a prominent business man, has accepted the War Department appointment as an Ordnance district chief. These appointments are being made in accordance with the department's plan for industrial preparedness by the creation of a civilian "general staff" to control war-time industrial mobilization.

The district chiefs thus far appointed are as follows, the military titles where used indicating a Reserve commission: Mr. Howard Bruce, Baltimore; Col. C. H. Tenney, Boston; Col. B. A. Franklin, Bridgeport; Mr. E. A. Russell, Chicago; Mr. C. L. Harrison, Cincinnati; Col. Bascom Little, Cleveland; Col. John R. Delafield, New York; Mr. J. C. Jones, Philadelphia; Mr. R. M. Dravo, Pittsburgh, and Mr. M. E. Singleton, St. Louis. In the event of war each would in effect become the chief of ordnance for his district.

Mr. Bruce, the latest appointment, made a fine record in the production of munitions during the World War. Starting with only 526 employees in 1916, increasing to approximately 2,758 by the early part of 1917, when the Bartlett Hayward Co. began to manufacture munitions for the United States, the number of employees rapidly increased, so that it had 21,170 on its pay roll at the time the Armistice was signed in November, 1918.

This company was the first producer of 75-mm. shrapnel to have its product reach our forces in France, and this record is all the more creditable when it is considered that its normal activities are quite foreign to ammunition manufacture.

The Baltimore district Ordnance office has been established at the corner of Scott and McHenry streets, Baltimore, Md., with Capt. H. S. Wilkins, Ord. Dept., U.S.A., as executive assistant to Mr. Bruce.

Credit for Parade as Armory Drill Nat. Guard

ON June 21, 1922, Maj. Gen. George C. Rickards, Chief of the Militia Bureau of the War Department, issued a circular to the National Guard relative to members being allowed credit for participation in parades. It read as follows:

"Credit cannot be allowed to members of organizations of the National Guard for participation in parades, as such do not constitute the amount of instruction necessary in order to be classed as an outdoor exercise allowed to be credited as a drill under Paragraph 928 (1) and (j), National Guard Regulations, 1922."

The above circular has been revoked, effective June 21, 1922, on which date it was issued, and the following decision will govern all cases of this character. It reads:

"Supplemental rolls may be prepared covering drill pay to organizations of the National Guard for participation in parades, reviews and other similar exercises provided such exercises were prescribed for the entire organization and were of a duration of one and one-half hours for each occasion on which armory drill pay is claimed, and provided further, that the requirements of laws and regulations with respect to strength and attendance were met."

Army and Navy Club, N.Y., Elects New Governors

THE annual election of governors of the Army and Navy Club of America in New York city on Jan. 10 resulted in the selection of Col. John J. Byrne, Maj. William M. Chadbourne, Lieut. Comdr. John H. S. Dessez, Col. Wade H. Hayes, Brig. Gen. Nelson H. Henry, Comdr. Charles S. Joyce, Col. George C. Reid and Brig. Gen. William Weigel, for three years, and Comdr. C. H. Mathews for one year.

Authority granted March 10, 1920, and not used, for the issue of bonds to be used in erection of a club house, was rescinded. A second resolution provides for refunding existing mortgages of $420,000, now a lien on the club house. It empowers the Board of Governors to negotiate a first mortgage of $400,000 and a second of $200,000, second mortgage bonds to be issued in the amount of $200,000.

Another resolution felicitates the board on the healthy conditions within the club, and for their devotion to duty, especially thanking Col. Franklin Q. Brown, chairman, for his zeal. Thanks are also extended to General Henry, treasurer; Major Sigaud, treasurer; Capt. Russell Raynor of the house committee, and Mr. B. F. Jolley, manager.

Secretary's Recommendations for the Naval Omnibus Bill

OUT of some hundred bills which have been introduced and referred to the Navy Department, a list of the most urgent has been selected and endorsed in a letter from the Secretary of Navy to Chairman Page of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs. Among those which were not approved by the Secretary of the Navy was the Kellogg amendment to the Omnibus bill providing for volunteer retirement from the Navy on graded pay. The Secretary refused to approve this bill even with an amendment which would make it effective after twenty years' service.

Sec. 14 contains provisions of H.R. 13556, Marine Corps Personnel bill.

Sec. 15. That hereafter all persons in confinement pursuant to a duly approved sentence of a naval court-martial whose enlistments have expired or who may have been dismissed from the naval service, shall, until discharged from confinement, remain subject in all respects to the Articles for the Government of the Navy and all other laws for the administration of justice in the Navy, and shall be liable to trial by courts-martial.

Sec. 16 authorizes Secretary of the Navy to loan equipment for naval training or instruction to schools and colleges having a course in naval or military training or science approved by the Secretary of the Navy; and to detail to said schools and colleges such available active or retired officers of the Regular Navy or Marine Corps as he may deem necessary for duty as professors or instructors in naval or military training or science: Provided, that while so detailed such retired officers, when of or below grade or rank of captain in Navy or colonel in Marine Corps, shall receive full active pay and allowances of their respective grades or ranks based upon total length of active service: Provided further, that in time of peace retired officers shall not be detailed under provisions of this section without their consent.

Sec. 17 provides for commission warrant grades of chief electrician and chief radio electrician, and the warrant grades of electrician and radio electrician in the U.S. Navy. Sec. 18 establishes the warrant grade of pay clerk in the Marine Corps. Pay clerks now in the Marine Corps who are warranted as pay clerks under this section shall take rank in accordance with their present dates of precedence. The commission warrant grades of chief marine gunner, chief quartermaster clerk, and chief pay clerk in the Marine Corps are hereby established. Nothing contained herein shall be construed so as to reduce the pay, allowances, emoluments, or other benefits that any person now in the Service would have received but for the passage of this section. The total number of warrant officers and commissioned warrant officers shall not exceed the number of warrant officers and pay clerks now authorized by law.

Sec. 19. That when an officer of the Navy has served 40 years as a commissioned officer, or is 60 years old, he may in the discretion of the President be retired from active service and placed on the retired list of the Navy with 75 per cent. of the pay of the grade or rank in which retired.

Sec. 20. That hereafter the appropriation "Maintenance, Quartermaster's Department, Marine Corps," shall be available for the purchase of civilian outer clothing, not to exceed $15 per man, to be issued when necessary to men discharged for bad conduct, undesirability, unfitness, or incapacity.

Sec. 21. Hereafter the total number of chaplains on the active list at any one time, exclusive of additional numbers in grade, shall be distributed in proportion of 6 in rank of captain, to 12 in rank of commander, to 82 in ranks below commander.

The grade of acting chaplain is abolished and hereafter all original appointments to Corps of Chaplains shall be made, after examination, in the grade of chaplain for a probationary period of not less than three years, of which at least two years shall be sea service on board ship or service on shore beyond the continental limits of the United States, and the probationary commissions of such officers may be revoked at any time by the Secretary of the Navy: Provided, that all officers of Corps of Chaplains who were appointed in accordance with the act of June 30, 1914, shall be commissioned as chaplains from date of original appointment in corps subject to foregoing provisions as to probationary service, in computation of which they shall be credited with all service heretofore rendered as acting chaplains: Provided further, that commissions of chaplains shall become permanent upon report of a board of chaplains, approved by the Secretary, that they have satisfactorily completed the probationary period and possess the necessary mental, moral, and professional qualifications.

That chaplains, when originally commissioned, shall have rank of Lieutenant (j.g.), and all chaplains shall, subject to examinations, be advanced in rank up to and including rank of lieutenant commander with officers of line of same, or next earlier date of appointment as Lieutenant (j.g.); Provided, that officers who have gained or lost numbers in list of chaplains shall be considered to have gained or lost precedence accordingly.

That nothing in this act shall be construed to entitle any officer now in the Corps of Chaplains to increased rank, pay, or allowances prior to date of this act, or to reduce present rank, pay, or allowances of any such officer, and acting chaplains shall retain their present status until commissioned in accordance with this section.

Sec. 22. That the following provision of Sec. 3 of the act approved Oct. 6, 1917, "that brigadier generals of the Army shall hereafter rank relatively with rear admirals of the lower half of the grade" is hereby repealed.

Promotions and Retirements

COL PATRICK A. CONNOLLY, Inf.

U.S.A., who was retired from active service Dec. 31, 1922, for disability incident thereto, was wounded twice in Philippine campaigns, being shot in the leg and cut on the cheek with a bolo in a hand-to-hand fight with a Filipino. He was at that time with General Lawton's command. Colonel Connolly also served, among other duties, with the A.E.F. during the World War. He was born in Ireland, Feb. 4, 1872, and entered the Regular Army of the United States as a private in the 21st Infantry in July, 1893. He received his first commission, that of second lieutenant, 5th Artillery, in July, 1898. He was transferred to the 21st Infantry the following December and by subsequent assignments and transfers he served as an officer of the 26th, 10th, 45th, 36th and 60th regiments of Infantry.

COL ROBERT W. MEARN, Inf., U.S.A., who was retired from active service Dec. 31, 1922, for disability incident thereto, served during the World War as a temporary brigadier general. He was born in Pennsylvania, July 16, 1866, and was graduated from the U.S.M.A. in the class of 1892, when he was assigned to the 20th Infantry. He subsequently served as an officer of the 12th, 45th and 47th Regiments of Infantry. Colonel Mearns, among other duties, served with his regiment throughout the Santiago campaign and was in action there, and also in Philippine campaigns. He served as a major of Philippine Scouts, on the Mexican border with General Pershing and was in command of the 17th Division at Camp Beauregard, La., Nov. 1, 1918, to Feb. 5, 1919.

COL JOHN W. BARNE, Inf., U.S.A., who was retired from active service Dec. 31, 1922, for disability incident thereto, is a graduate of the Army School of the Line and a graduate of the Infantry School. He was born in California, April 11, 1877, and entered the Regular Army as a second lieutenant, 18th Infantry, from civil life Sept. 9, 1898. He subsequently served as an officer of the 24th, 18th, 25th, 18th, 34th and 3d Infantry.

COL LE VERT COLEMAN, Coast Art., U.S.A., who was retired Dec. 31, 1922, for disability incident to the service, was born in Alabama, Sept. 7, 1877, and is a graduate of the U.S.M.A., class of 1899, when he was assigned to the 5th Artillery. Among other duties, Colonel Coleman served in the Philippines as well as at various posts in the United States. He was military attaché at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; was on duty in the office of the Chief of Staff, and went to France with the 49th Artillery, C.A.C., in October, 1918, serving with the command to July 23, 1919. He was at Coblenz, Germany, as a member of the Liquidation Commission and was later liaison officer with the headquarters of the French army on the Rhine and chief of the American Mission.

COL THOMAS H. REES, Corps of Engineers, U.S.A., who was retired Dec. 31, 1922, for disability incident to the service, was born in Michigan, Oct. 18, 1863, and was graduated from the U.S.M.A. in the class of 1886, being No. 4 in the class, and was assigned to the Corps of Engineers. #### EAKER—CHASE.

The marriage of Miss Leah Prescott Chase, daughter of Maj. Chauncy L. Chase, Med. Corps, U.S.A., and Mrs. Chase, to Capt. Ira Clarence Eaker, A.S., U.S.A., took place Jan. 2 at the officers' club, Mitchel Field, N.Y. The ceremony was performed by Chaplain Willis T. Howard, U.S.A., who used the ring service of the Episcopal Church. The hop room of the club was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Weaver, wife of the commanding officer of Mitchel Field, was matron of honor; Miss Mary Chase, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Eugene Barksdale were attendants, and Little "Billy" Abey was flower girl. Lieut. N. Longfellow was best man. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crepe satin, made with a full court train, hung from the shoulders, and her long veil of tulle was held in place by a dainty crown of orange blossoms. Across the bottom of the court train was a wide band of white fox, also around the low square neck of the gown. She wore a string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and Calla lilies. Upon the conclusion of the service, the ushers drew sabers and formed an arch with them, beneath which the bridal party passed. As they marched out the music of Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered by Lieutenant Rowland and accompanist. All repaired to the large dining room of the club, where a buffet luncheon was served, the wedding cake being cut by the bride with the bridegroom's saber. After the reception, dancing was enjoyed by all. The ushers were Captain Buhler and Lieutenants Finter, Watson, Connell, Barksdale, Valentine, Monahan and Norris. There are twenty-six chaplains of the U.S. Army who have had no duty outside of the continental limits of the United States. "These," says Col. John T. Axton, Chief of Chaplains, "are in group one on the foreign service roster. It is estimated that the requirements for replacements will be about eight per year. On account of the shortage of funds for transportation, those chaplains serving nearest to ports of embarkation will be the first recommended for duty overseas."

Capt. James Graham Phelps Stokes, adjutant of the 9th Coast Defense Command, N.Y.N.G., was presented with the Conspicuous Service Cross of the state of New York at a review in the armory Dec. 27 last. Col. George W. Burleigh in making the presentation on behalf of the Adjutant General of the state, said, in part: "I have much pleasure in presenting you with the Conspicuous Service Cross of the state of New York in recognition of the wonderful work you have performed and the distinguished services you have rendered to New York troops throughout the period of the World War, in combating the secret activities of hostile powers desiring to promote insurrection within the state."

The following tribute to two Army officers was printed in the Outlook of Dec. 6, 1922, in Sherman Rogers's article "Alaska, the Misunderstood": "The Alaska Road Commission is the one bureau in the North that is absolutely free from red tape. Col. James G. Steese and Maj. John C. Gotwals, president and engineer officer, respectively, of this commission, are two wonderfully efficient, rugged, "red-tapeless" men. They are not of the arm-chair variety, but have traveled thousands of miles by dog-team in winter and pack-train in summer over the various mineral and agricultural districts of Alaska. They know where roads ought to go; they know where trails should be built; they know every district where construction is most urgently needed."

Major General, U.S. Army.

TRAINING CAMPS FOR 1923.

G.O. 2, JAN. 8, 1923, 1ST CORPS AREA.

1. Camps of instruction and field exercises for National Guard, Organized Reserves, Reserve Officers' Training Corps and Citizens'
Military Training Camps in the 1st Corps
Area will be held during the months of June, July and August. In addition to organizations which belong to the 1st Corps Area, provision will have to be made for two regiments of National Guard Coast Artillery from New York, the Corps Cadets from the U.S.
Military Academy, and perhaps other units from the 2d Corps Area.

2. Instructors have to be drawn from the Regular personnel under jurisdiction of the corps area commander, with the exception of a limited number of officers who are furnished by the War Department from graduates of Service Schools and a few Reserve Corps officers for Citizens' Military Training Camps.

It will call for the utmost good management to supply from available personnel the necessary number of qualified instructors at times and places required. For this reason it is anticipated leaves of absence for officers, warrant officers and field clerks and furloughs for enlisted men of the Regular Army will have to be materially curtailed, if not entirely denied, except in unusual cases, during the months of June, July and August, 1923.

3. It has become apparent that Regular Army personnel must learn to consider these 3 months as their busiest time of the year and a time when all must be present for duty with their commands. Otherwise, the Regular Army will not meet its obligation to the other components of the Army of the United States.

It is therefore suggested that those concerned arrange for their vacations at periods other than during the months of June, July and August, 1923. Applications for leaves and furloughs during these 3 months will be referred to corps area headquarters for action.

By command of Maj. Gen. Brewster:

H. G. LEARNARD, Chief of Staff.

G.O. 79, DEC. 28, 1922, 8TH CORPS AREA.

Border Command—1. The following amendments to G.O. 2, current series, these headquarters, are made effective upon receipt of this order:

Fort Bliss Command—From the Arroyo
Macho, inclusive, to the Arizona state line.

Camp Furlong Command—To be omitted.

Add to part 2 the following: (g) Camp Furlong, Columbus, N.M., under Fort Bliss.

2. The troops comprising the garrison at Camp Furlong will be indicated by the commanding general, Fort Bliss, and should be limited to the minimum number essential for the proper administration and security of the subpost and its supplies.

3. The troops comprising the garrison at Camp Furlong will be relieved and replaced by others at such intervals as in the judgment of the commanding general, Fort Bliss, may be for the best interests of the Service.

By command of Maj. Gen. Lewis:

THOMAS H. SLAVENS, Chief of Staff.

GENERAL OFFICERS.

The appointment of following officers to the grades set opposite their respective names, with rank from Dec. 30, 1922, is announced:

NAVAL ACADEMY.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10, 1923.

Mrs. Wilson, wife of Rear Adm. Henry B. Wilson, was at home Wednesday, and on Thursday entertained at a supper dance, the first formal entertainment by her since her recent illness. Miss Elizabeth King, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ernest King, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Stuart Edgerton, at Roland Park, Baltimore.

Lt. George S. Vanderkloot, recently assigned to the department of electrical engineering, Mrs. Vanderkloot and baby are stopping for the present at Carvel Hall.

Lt. Cdr. and Mrs. W. N. Richardson entertained at a bowling party at the officers' mess Monday evening. Lt. and Mrs. George S. Arvin entertained at bridge Friday evening. Among their guests was Miss Pauline Scott of Washington, who is visiting them. Mrs. Shoemaker, wife of Cdr. H. E. Shoemaker, entertained at a dinner party of ten covers at Hotel del Coronado New Year's evening. Odr. Nathaniel H. Wright has been the holiday guest of his aunt, Mrs. Charles O. Graves, in Mission Hill.

from a visit to her parents, Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Busey, Lynchburg, Va. Lt. Cdr. and Mrs. Harry G. Patrick and two children left Sunday on the transport Argonne for the West coast, Lt. Cdr. Patrick having been ordered there for duty.

The hop Saturday night in the armory was for members of the first and second classes. Mrs. D. M. Garrison received with Madan, F. O. Stevens.

Lt. and Mrs. D. W. Cee and two children have returned to Philadelphia after a visit to Mrs. Cee's grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Dorsey.

Mrs. Anna Brewer of this city sailed on the Argonne for the West coast, where she will visit her son-in-law and daughter, Ens. and Mrs. E. I. McQuiston.

Louis L. Vodila of McKeesport, Pa., appointed to the Naval Academy from the Marine Corps, is the strongest midshipman now at the Academy, according to official tests just completed. His total score is 7,345 points, against 7,185 of Wendell S. Taylor, the football end, who up to this time has stood at the top. Arthur W. Lentz, the football guard, who came from Rutgers, also topped Taylor's record, with 7,235 points. Vodila has taken no part in athletics, chiefly because he did not enter the Academy until late in September, and escaped the culling out, which is an important part of the summer's routine. Now, however, the different coaches are looking him up, rowing and wrestling being regarded as sports for which he is particularly fitted. He weighs 181 pounds and is an inch over six feet in height.

WEST POINT.

West Point, N.Y., Jan. 10, 1923.

Agree to Report Out Marine Corps Bill

AFTER two days hearing the House Committee on Naval Affairs reached an understanding by which H.R. 13556, a bill to inaugurate promotion by selection in the Marine Corps, will be reported out favorably early next week. An effort will be made to secure early consideration by the House through a special rule. The same bill will be before the Senate committee next week as a part of the Naval Omnibus bill. The complete text of H.R. 13556 was printed on page 446 of this paper Jan. 6.

In answer to questions from the members of the committee, General Lejeune said that the Army class "B" elimination law is too complicated for the Marine Corps. Under that law, he explained, a court of inquiry must be convened in addition to the board, and there is not the machinery in the Marine Corps to administer it.

Under the bill before the committee General Lejeune explained the entire matter would be in the hands of a central board composed of the ranking officers at Washington, Quantico and Philadelphia. The questions for the professional examinations could be sent to officers at far-away stations who could conduct the examination of the candidate.

When an officer fails to pass the examination for promotion, he would be left in his present grade, the general went on to point out, and that it is evident that he could not be left there too long and remain efficient. It is apparent, insisted the general, that a man sixty-three years of age could not perform the duty of a first lieutenant. Therefore, the provision by which officers would retire at a certain age in the grades is inserted in the bill. Lieutenant colonels would retire automatically when they reached fifty years and majors, captains, first lieutenants and second lieutenants at forty-five years.

"We have placed in the bill," the general continued, "the Army law which provides for a list of colonels who are eligible for promotion to general officers."

Replying to a number of questions as to why at this particular time he should ask for the passage of the bill, General Lejeune said that "we have in the Marine Corps a large number of officers who have had long service as enlisted men, but are unable to pass the examinations, and we do not wish to put them out of the Service under the present system. They were valuable in the war. Many of them were old non-coms who have not had the advantage of an education. They are growing old and falter when it comes to examinations. Of course, they will be given a full opportunity to qualify for promotion as they are valuable men and have splendid war records."

Representative Hicks questioned General Lejeune quite closely as to whether the central board would not be influenced by the personal relations with the candidates.

Mr. Hicks said: "Does not the matter as to whether members of the board are personally acquainted with the candidate enter into its decision. Does not the matter of 'personal equation' enter into any selection scheme?"

General Lejeune said: "Of course if the member of a board knows an officer personally, knows absolutely that he is qualified or disqualifies, that naturally has great weight."

Pressing the question farther, Mr. Hicks said:

"Do you not have a friendly feeling for an officer with whom you have served? A total stranger to you may have better qualifications than your friends, but would not fare as well. This is only natural."

Chairman Butler interjected "as I understand it your intention is to promote on service records alone."

General Lejeune added "and upon the result of his examination—physical and mental. This board will have the dual function. Its action will finish the case."

Chairman Butler: "Suppose that a candidate for promotion passed No. 1 in a written examination and the reports concerning him from his commanding officer were adverse."

General Lejeune: "If reports against him affected his ability to command troops and suitability for a higher grade, he would not be promoted. The main consideration is leadership."

General Lejeune explained that the Judge Advocate General would pass upon the legal features of the board's report, and that he would be authorized to make recommendations to the Secretary, but it remained for the Secretary to approve or disapprove the report of the board. If the Secretary disapproved of the report of the board, the officer would go before the second board for another examination.

Col. Rufus H. Lane, Lieut. Col. Hugh Matthews, Maj. E. M. Shearer and Capt. Frank Whitehead and John M. Arthur accompanied General Lejeune. They were not, however, called upon to make any formal statement to the committee, although General Lejeune frequently referred to them questions that were asked him during the testimony.

In the course of his discussion of the bill with the committee General Lejeune said that every other Service had some system under which it is able to eliminate officers who are not qualified for promotion or are not up to its standard. In this respect he insisted it had been recognized for some time that the Marine Corps personnel system was defective.

He pointed out that in the Army such officers were eliminated by a process of selecting out. In the Navy officers of this class are left in the lower grades by the operation of a system of selection for promotion. The only selection in the Marine Corps below the grade of brigadier general is through the usual examinations. The old system of examination in the Marine Corps, General Lejeune argued, was doing very little to keep up the efficiency of the corps.

The committee was on Section 2 when it adjourned Jan. 9. Especially Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia was apprehensive lest the feature of the section which permits the examining board to act without the appearance of the officer would not be satisfactory. General Lejeune thought that this was safeguarded carefully owing to the fact that in the case of moral or physical disqualification the officer has the right to appear personally and present his case. General Lejeune also expressed the belief that local boards could examine officers in some cases where there were a sufficient number stationed. There were questions asked by members of the committee as to how the central examining board was to be conducted.

The "Eyes" of the Investor

OPINION REPORTS on securities are to the investor what aeroplanes are to the army.

Just as the aeroplanes bring information to army officers on which to base their campaigns, so do our OPINION REPORTS bring information and FACTS to the investor on which to base his investments.

These OPINION REPORTS are confidential personal letters on securities you own or contemplate purchasing. Each problem, each security, each investor is given individual attention and study. These reports dig deep—are complete. They leave nothing to be desired.

OPINION REPORTS on stocks or bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange, $4 for one security; $10 for three securities.

OPINION REPORTS on unlisted stocks or bonds $6 for each security.

Write us a letter, giving us the names of securities you hold or contemplate purchasing, enclose your remittance and confidential OPINION REPORT will be sent you after proper research has been made.

We shall cheerfully refund your money if these Reports do not completely satisfy you.

Financial Digest

Hereafter the Army and Navy Journal will publish in this column a digest of the financial and investment situation, edited by Mr. Sykes, as an added service to its readers. This paper will be glad to furnish to its readers information on any brokerage house. A letter addressed to the Army and Navy Journal, 354 Fourth avenue, New York city, will bring the information desired.

The statements made herein are based upon information and statistics which we consider reliable. But as not made upon our personal knowledge we do not, of course, guarantee their correctness.

By Raymond V. Sykes.

Developments during the past week have been of a rather momentous character in the foreign political arena, but the only reflection in domestic security markets was a deadlock in price movements. Whether England or France is in the right is too perplexing a problem to be solved off-hand. The stock market so far has simply marked time and not accepted the reparation show-down as unfavorable, nor business improvement at home as favorable.

The Political Crisis in Europe.

There is, of course, the possibility that the political crisis abroad will assume a more serious complexion, but it does not follow that the effect in this country will necessarily be alarming. As a matter of fact, the economic situation in continental Europe cannot become very much more entangled, or the substitution of French troops for British and American on the Rhine have any great influence in America.

What is of more importance here is an apparent change in the temperament of our own leaders. The mission of Clemenceau has borne more fruit than is generally appreciated. Even the more radical members of the farm bloc have awakened to the importance of a European market for our surplus agricultural products, and it is just possible that America will assume a more active rôle in straightening out European finances.

At best, the view is not clear, but every day is bringing conclusive action nearer, and meanwhile economic revival at home is not being interfered with.

Stability of Sterling.

While the stock market has been a rather disinterested spectator of the Paris Conference and the resolution of France to act alone, foreign exchange rates have been more sensitive. Sterling has held its own, but marks touched a new low of more than ten thousand to the dollar, and weakness developed also in French and Belgian francs. One stabilizing influence in the case of the pound sterling is the decline of 2½ per cent. in the general average of basic commodity prices in England during 1922, as compared with an upturn of 12½ per cent. in the United States.

The improved buying power of sterling is fundamental and not discounted by political developments. Grain and cotton prices showed some hesitancy, and in fact, actual weakness, over European affairs, but only temporarily.

Gains in Railroad Freight.

Freight carloadings continue at high levels, December surpassing any year on record. Total freight loaded during 1922 exceeded that of 1921 by 10.70% and was only 3.43% below 1920, the record traffic year. It should be remembered that the business revival was not under way until 1922, was well started, and also the coal strike during the summer interfered with the shipment of coal and ore. The 1922 loadings were approximately 1,500,000 cars less than in 1920, the decline in coal shipments more than accounting for this. The greatest gain in 1922 over 1920 was in less-than-carload lots of merchandise, the increase amounting to 32.41%.

Large Output of Pig Iron.

Another very healthy sign of the times is the sustained output of pig iron. Daily average production in December was 99,577 tons, against 58,196 tons in December, 1921, and 87,222 tons in December, 1920. The December daily average production was the largest since October, 1920, when the output was 105,735 tons.

The largest daily average production on record was for October, 1916, with 113,189 tons. Normally, December and the winter months see a decline in iron production, but this year there has been a consistent expansion, month by month, throughout the year with the exception of August, when there was a coal and coke shortage.

Speculative Possibilities.

The technical position of the stock market appears sound. The influence of easy money conditions had long since been discounted and first-grade bonds and preferred stocks have lost their speculative possibilities. Dividend paying common stocks of the best grade also are at levels where the buyer or owner should be wary. From a purely speculative standpoint, the low-priced, non-dividend paying shares are in the best position. This class is the last to participate in a bull market and its turn is probably not far off.

Under cover of speculative excitement in low-priced issues there is pretty certain to be distribution of the high-priced dividend payers. It is not improbable that certain amount of distribution is taking place at this time. Very attractive speculative possibilities are found in the so-called "income bonds." Interest on such issues is paid when earned only, but the outlook for all of the roads represented in the following suggestions is so promising as to lead to believe disbursement will take place on these bonds during the coming year.

BATTERY PARK

But Few Homes Left in New Service Colony at Washington

MADDUX, MARSHALL & CO. report rapid progress in the development of BATTERY PARK, with only eight of the first fifty homes remaining available for selection. Building operations have begun and it is contemplated to have the first fifty homes in this attractive new subdivision adjoining Edgemore, Md., completed by the end of the year. The first fifty homes are being sold at estimated cost of land, buildings, and improvements, and but eight remain available.

Prompt action will be necessary to take advantage of this unusual offer.

Letters of congratulation are finding their way to Maj. and Mrs. A. E. Randall on the arrival of a girl, born at the St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco on Sunday night.

Questions and Answers

Questions having to do with military or naval matters will be answered in this department as soon as possible after their receipt, or, lacking space, by mail, provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is sent. Communications must in all cases be signed, giving the correct name and address of the inquirer.

C. C. P.—The age and weight requirements for the U.S. Naval Academy admission are: All candidates are required to be citizens of the United States and must be not less than 16 years of age nor more than 20 years of age on April 1 of the calendar year in which they enter the Naval Academy (act approved May 14, 1918).<sup>1</sup>

"Attention will also be paid to the stature of the candidate, and no one manifestly under size for his age will be received at the Academy. The height of candidates for admission shall not be less than 5 feet 2 inches at the age of 16 years, with an increase of 1 inch for each additional year or fraction of a year over one-half; and the minimum weight at 16 years of age shall be 111 pounds, with an increase of not less than 3 pounds for each additional year, or fraction of a year over one-half. Any marked deviation in the height and weight relative to the age of a candidate will add materially to the consideration for rejection."

Write to the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, Washington, D.C., for circular information as to vacancies.

G. W. T.—The pay of a retired first lieutenant of over 20 years' service, under the Pay law of 1908, is $2,100 per annum. The maximum for lieutenant, retired, over 30 years' service, under the act of June 10, 1922, is $2,700.

MX.—Third Infantry left U.S. Feb. 3, 1899, for Manila; arrived back in U.S. April 15, 1902. Time at sea, about four weeks each way does not count double toward retirement.

TACTICAL.

W. E. B. asks: A contends that at rifle salute at right shoulder arms (without the numbers) the hand is held up against the cocking piece until the command "Two" is given. B claims that at the command "Rifle salute" the hand is brought up to the position of rifle salute and returned without waiting for the command "Two." Who is right?

Answer: This movement is interpreted as falling under the same general rules as the manual of arms. If given by the numbers the hand is dropped at "Two." Otherwise the salute is executed in the cadence of quick time, the left hand being dropped without further command.

J. W. McL. asks: (1) What does the leading man on the right flank do on column right? A says on turning he takes the half step; B says he takes one full step and then half step. Which is right? (2) The command is "At trail forward march" and they are still marching, and "Squad right" is given. Do they come to right shoulder, or continue at the trail?

Answer: (1) While no interpretation of this movement has been given by the War Department, the movement is interpreted and executed as follows at the U.S. Military Academy: The pivot man in executing column right faces to the right in marching and takes a full step as his first step in the new direction. He then takes up the half step and continues this until the marching flank has arrived abreast of him. In practice it has been found that after he has taken eight half steps the marching flank is abreast of him, and on the ninth step he steps off with the full step. The taking of one full step by the pivot man before beginning the half step has been found very desirable for the purpose of getting him off the pivot and preventing the man in rear of him from obliquing to the left. In practice it has been found that if the pivot man takes up the half step immediately there is always a tendency for the pivot gradually to work over to the left due to the obliquing of the successive pivot man as they arrive at the point where they change direction.

(2) After a movement is begun at the trail the piece is held in this position, irrespective of what movement is executed, until the command halt is given. This conforms to the sixth general rule under the Manual of Arms, in which it is specified that the piece is brought to the right shoulder at the command "March" only if at the order.

B. J. asks: Being at "Trail arms," can the other different positions of the manual of arms be executed from this position both at a halt and in marching?

Answer: Par. 9, I.D.R., states that any movement may be executed either from a halt or while marching, unless otherwise prescribed. The sixth general rule covering the manual of arms in par. 76, I.D.R., states that whenever circumstances require, the regular positions of the manual of arms may be ordered without regard to the previous position of the piece. These paragraphs permit any position of the piece to be assumed from any other position either while marching or at a halt, but in practice only the right shoulder and left shoulder are habitually taken from the trail.
